Large bitcoin payment made to far-right individuals before U.S. Capitol attack: report By Reuters Staff (Reuters) - Payments in bitcoin worth more than $500,000 were made to 22 different virtual wallets, most of them belonging to far-right activists and internet personalities, before the storming of the U.S. Capitol, cryptocurrency compliance startup Chainalysis said on Friday.

The payments, made by a French donor, of 28.15 bitcoins were made on Dec. 8, the New York-based startup, specializing in countering money laundering and fraud in the digital currency space, said in a blog post. (bit.ly/3bG83yE)

Chainalysis said it now has evidence that many alt-right groups and personalities received large bitcoin donations as part of the single transaction.

"We have also gathered evidence that strongly suggests the donor was a now-deceased computer programmer based in France," Chainalysis said in the report.

Nick Fuentes, who was permanently suspended from YouTube last year for hate speech, received 13.5 bitcoins, worth about $250,000 at the time of the transfer, making him by far the biggest beneficiary of the donation, according to the blog post.

Fuentes could not be reached for a request for comment.

FEMA Releases "Coronavirus Disease (COVID-19) Initial Assessment Report"

FEMA releases its "Coronavirus Disease (COVID-19) Initial Assessment Report < Caution-https://lnks.gd/l/eyJhbGciOiJIUzI1NiJ9.eyJidWxsZXRpbl9saW5rX2lkIjoxMDAsInVyaSI6ImJwMjpjbGljayIsImJ1bGxldGluX2lkIjoiMjAyMTAxMTUuMzM0MDc3MzEiLCJ1cmwiOiJodHRwczovL3d3dy5mZW1hLmdvdi9kaXNhc3RlcnMvY29yb25hdmlydXMifQ.rDLhV8fqWPw32a7YudbKORQY6naebmQ6O7y1KC-4ex8/s/559065462/br/93190490040-1 > "which assesses the agency's initial response to the global pandemic."

Highlighted items in the report show the challenges the agency faced, including needing to clarify roles and authorities between responding agencies and managing complex interagency coordination while still protecting its own workforce. The report covers FEMA's response from mid-March through Sept. 30, 2020 and provides 32 key findings and 57 recommendations in five areas.

FEMA partnered with the private sector, non-governmental organizations and other federal agencies to better manage the complex logistical operations. To drastically speed up the arrival of medical supplies and personal protective equipment (PPE) to the domestic market, FEMA chartered privately owned planes for medical distributors, reducing the transit time between manufacturer and customer from 30–45 days via ocean freight to approximately five days via air freight. Project Airbridge chartered 249 flights over a span of 92 days and delivered roughly 1.73 billion units of personal protective equipment (PPE) and medical supplies to prioritized areas.

While coordinating the federal COVID-19 response, FEMA responded to multiple disasters. The year 2020 was the most active Atlantic hurricane season in history with 25 named Atlantic Ocean storms, three of which were declared major disasters across seven states.

FEMA's COVID-19 operations led to innovations for coordination with government and non-government partners on implementing national distribution networks and innovative solutions to data management and analysis and manufacturing and procuring scarce resources. The agency's adaptive workforce enabled it to facilitate an effective operational response to the pandemic.

The report findings and recommendations will be used to inform FEMA and the emergency management community and improve existing and future responses to pandemics. The Initial Assessment Report represents part of FEMA's continuous improvement process, helping the agency learn faster and to communicate to the emergency management community where there are opportunities to build greater capacity.

France has historically been the major Western power guaranteeing political stability in the Francophone countries of northwest and central Africa. However, Turkey has increasingly matched French influence in North Africa, while the United States, to an extent, has done the same in Niger and perhaps Rwanda (France24 < Caution-https://Jamestown.us11.list-manage.com/track/click?u=28b6673fcc2022a1dd557acae&id=da7527260d&e=ebf6228344 > , December 24, 2020). While Russia provides weapons to various Francophone countries, it has also become the protector of the Central African Republic (CAR). Prior to this, France had been the most influential foreign power in CAR and neighboring countries, including, for example, Chad, where Paris has consistently "propped up" its three decades-long President Idriss Déby (rfi.fr < Caution-https://Jamestown.us11.list-

Islamic State Sinai Province Targets Egypt-Israel Gas Pipeline

Jacob Zenn

Since February 2018, Egypt has waged an intense counter-insurgency against Islamic State (IS) Sinai Province (Arab News < Caution-https://Jamestown.us11.list-manage.com/track/click?u=28b6673fcc2022a1dd557acae&id=10fad3c48d&e=ebf6228344 > , December 25, 2020). Despite this, Sinai Province has claimed more attacks than any other IS external province except for Islamic State in West Africa Province (ISWAP). Sinai Province attacks have included firing mortars at Egyptian military posts and ambushing Egyptian troops, However, one of the more geopolitically significant types of attack has been Sinai Province's targeting of the gas pipeline that extends from the province into Israel. Three have occurred this year, including on February 3, November 19, and, most recently, on December 26 near Sabika in North Sinai. This is west of al-Arish and around 30 miles from Rafah in the Gaza Strip. When IS claimed the latest pipeline attack, the group unsurprisingly stated Sinai Province's motive was to disrupt the pipeline because it is connected to Israel. The attack was not particularly effective because it did not disrupt gas supply, civilians' housing, or the nearby industrial park (Egypttoday.com < Caution-https://Jamestown.us11.list-

Response to the Biden Administration

Angela Ramirez

The Boogaloo Bois is a recently formed decentralized armed movement comprised of loosely knit cells scattered throughout the United States. Boogaloo participants have also been involved in several attacks and plots, including the attempted kidnapping of Michigan's governor, an attempt to sell weapons to Hamas, and a deadly attack on a federal security officer in northern California. The movement is centered on participants' belief that the U.S. government has become excessively tyrannical. Participants, therefore, have concluded that a second civil war is unfortunate, but inevitable, in order to obtain "true liberty." The movement refers to this idealized second civil war as "the Boogaloo" (Spotify [Buck Johsnon] < Caution-https://Jamestown.us11.list-manage.com/track/click?u=28b6673fcc2022a1dd557acae&id=4d04773589&e=ebf6228344 > , July 2020). Occasionally, the word "Boogaloo" is exchanged for slang terms, however, such as "the big luau," the "Bungalow," or the "Big Igloo."

Boko Haram's Pan-Nigerian Affiliate System after the Kankara Kidnapping: A Microcosm of Islamic State's 'External Provinces'

Jacob Zenn

On December 11, 2020, around 300 male students were kidnapped from a Kankara, Katsina State school northwestern Nigeria (TheCable < Caution-https://Jamestown.us11.listin manage.com/track/click?u=28b6673fcc2022a1dd557acae&id=cf1a5fa904&e=ebf6228344 > , December 13, 2020). The attack was inconsistent with typical northwestern Nigeria banditry operations involving smaller-scale kidnapping and extortion, pillaging, and assassination of local political enemies that have escalated in northwestern Nigerian in recent years. The attack was, however, consistent with the past activities of the Boko Haram faction led by Abubakar Shekau. Shekau's faction is responsible for the mass killing of male students in their dormitories in 2013 and the Chibok kidnapping of more than 200 female students in Borno State, northeastern Nigeria in 2014. Furthermore, the Kankara kidnapping reflected Boko Haram's "affiliate system" because the attack was conducted by Boko Haram's northwestern Nigerian "affiliate" in the Katsina-Niger-Zamfara state axis, which is comprised primarily of bandits ("Niger" refers to Niger State, Nigeria, not the Republic of Niger).

Appeal of New People's Army among Indigenous Peoples

Jack Broome

On December 7, 2020, following speculation in the news, the Philippines President Rodrigo Duterte finally announced that the government would not offer a holiday ceasefire—as is tradition for this time of year—to the New People's Army (NPA), the armed wing of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP). Duterte's announcement came during his weekly address to the nation on the government's response to the COVID-19 pandemic, but Duterte went one step further by remainder of his presidency (abs-cbn.com < Caution-https://Jamestown.us11.list-manage.com/track/click?u=28b6673fcc2022a1dd557acae&id=a6c9f6b3d7&e=ebf6228344 > , December 8, 2020).

Good afternoon. Thank you very much to Vanderbilt Law School and in particular to the Vanderbilt Journal of Entertainment & Technology Law for hosting this event. I love Vanderbilt and I love Nashville, and I'm sorry not to be there in person with you today. Someday when COVID-19 is a memory and social distancing is something you do only with people you don't like, I look forward to returning to Nashville and reconnecting with many of my old friends there. More importantly, I look forward to returning to some of my favorite honkytonks and showing off my famous dance moves. I've been practicing at home in my free time, to make sure I'm ready.

The U.S. Attorney's Office for the Middle District of Pennsylvania announced that on Jan. 11, 2021, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit affirmed both the conviction and 27-month prison sentence of Murray Rojas, age, 54, of Grantville, Pennsylvania. That sentence was imposed by Senior U.S. District Court Judge Sylvia H. Rambo on May 6, 2019, after Rojas was convicted by a jury on multiple counts of causing prescription animal drugs to become misbranded in violation of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (FDCA), as well as conspiracy to commit misbranding.

(U) Scope

(U//FOUO) The Violent Extremism* Snapshot (VES) is intended to provide highlights of violent extremist content online in the U.S. and abroad. The Central Florida Intelligence Exchange (CFIX) bases its analysis in this report on information gathered from open source reporting, which includes internet and social media postings, with varying degrees of reliability. Unless specifically noted, the social media reporting in this product originated from users whose affiliation and credibility are unknown and are included for the purpose of providing broad trends in online behavior and situational awareness for federal, state, local, tribal, and territorial counterterrorism and law enforcement officials and private sector security partners.

(U) The information in this document is current as of 14 January 2021.

(U) First Amendment Acknowledgement

(U) The CFIX recognizes that Americans have constitutionally protected rights to assemble, speak, and petition the government. The CFIX safeguards these first amendment rights, and reports on only those activities where the potential use of rhetoric and/or propaganda could be used to incite violent or criminal acts. Additionally, potential criminality exhibited by certain members of a group does not negate the constitutional rights of the group itself or its law-abiding participants to exercise their individual liberties under the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

CFIX VIOLENT EXTREMISM SNAPSHOT

(U//FOUO) Domestic Violent Extremists (DVEs) Migrate to Alternative Social Media Platforms – In response to the 6 January 2021 breach of the U.S. Capitol, big tech companies such as Twitter and Facebook began deplatforming individuals and groups en masse. This included the removal of Parler from Amazon's server hosting service. In an effort to avoid censorship and maintain their online presence, DVEs of varying ideologies began migrating to existing alternative platforms such as MeWe, Telegram, Gab, Clouthub, Minds, and TikTok. Popular message boards such as 4chan and 8kun also experienced an increase in users. For encrypted communications, Signal Messenger and ProtonMail are being used. Analyst Note – For additional information on MeWe and Minds, please see CFIX Open Source Intelligence Bulletin titled "Violent Extremists and Other Threat Groups Use MeWe as an Alternative to Facebook and Use of Minds Crypto Social Network as an Alternative Platform by Violent Extremists".

(U//FOUO) Boogaloo Online Networks – With the arrest of several individuals affiliated with the Boogaloo movement in 2020, many social media platforms began to remove any Booglaoo-related individuals, groups and hashtags. As a result, these individuals began migrating to alternative platforms and can currently be found on Telegram, MeWe, Minds, and TikTok. Prior to its removal, Parler, had become very popular with individuals supporting the Boogaloo. Although Twitter did remove an extensive number of Boogaloo related accounts in 2020, CFIX has observed a growing number of Boogaloo related accounts and hashtags on this platform. On TikTok, Boogaloo related accounts are still active; however, are more difficult to locate due to being shadowbanned. Analyst Note – When a channel is shadowbanned, the content is blocked and a name and/or hashtag search will bring back no results. The shadowbanning has no effect on subscribers of the channel. Additionally, new users are still able to locate and join these channels by clicking hashtags shared by other TikTok users they have subscribed to.

(U//FOUO) Boogaloo Related News Site Gets Rickrolled – Boogaloo networks on Twitter have been sharing the website URL "treeofliberty.me" which currently redirects users to a YouTube music video for the 1987 Rick Astley song "Never Gonna Give You Up" instead of the intended website. The Tree of Liberty website is described as a "non-profit inside source for news related to the Boogaloo" with a section dedicated to providing up-to-date information and downloadable material for January 17th armed protests at the state capitols.

(U//FOUO) White Racially or Ethnically Motivated Extremists (WRMVEs) Hit with "Telegram Purge" — In response to the migration of DVEs to alternative platforms, Telegram has again come under scrutiny for its continued hosting of violent extremist channels. This has resulted in the removal of several prominent accelerationist WRMVE channels that identify as part of the Terrorgram network. Many of these channels have been active 1-2 years and had thousands of followers. In response to these suspensions, channel admins have encouraged everyone to archive their favorite channels.

They have also been creating back-up/clone channels so they can quickly resume their activities. At this time it appears that these account removals are a result of a coordinated effort by individuals to report these channels rather than Telegram proactively removing the channels for violating their Terms of Use.  Analyst Note – For additional information on how WRMVEs operate on Telegram, please see CFIX Open Source Intelligence Bulletin titled "Use of Telegram by White Supremacist Extremists".

(U//FOUO) DVE's Create Black Flag Depicting Ashli Babbit^{USPER} –DVEs across various social media platforms have shared a flag that was created to memorialize the events that occurred on 6 January at the U.S. Capitol. Ashli Babbit is described "the martyr that was shot in the neck" which is represented on the flag with the drop of blood. The four stars represent "the 4 Martyrs" that were killed at the Capitol and the background depicts that the event took place at the Capitol where blood was spilled. Many DVE's are using this as a battle flag and have encouraged any future actions be done under the banner of this flag. Many Boogaloo affiliated accounts on Twitter are urging followers to "raise the black flag" or "fly the black flag" along with posting .gifs of black flags or incorporating the black flag emoji () into their posts or profile descriptions. On various platforms, many anti-Government Violent Extremist (AGVE) and WRMVE are using this flag as their profile photos.

>You live in a town in the Midwest that's Dem for some reason or has a traitorous and unliked Rep as mayor?

However, they would also have some things that Jihadi John didn't, such as a livestream, a place on the Saints leaderboard, and a victory. Another prominent WRMVE channel provided a scenario where an individual lives in a Democratic Midwest town or a town with a

(U//FOUO) WRMVEs Encourage Followers to Live Stream Attacks -

Following the January 6th breech of the U.S. Capitol, prominent WRMVE

Telegram channels have mentioned livestreaming while inciting violent actions. In one post, subscribers of the channel were told that they were the new "jihadi john" and that like Jihadi John, they would need a rifle, a "traitorous" Republican as mayor. It was suggested that the Mayor be killed on livestream. If the Sheriff tries to get involved, it was suggested that he/she be killed as well.  Analyst Note – WRMVEs frequently include the phrase "[REDACTED]" in their posts to circumvent threatening terminology.

CFIX VIOLENT EXTREMISM SNAPSHOT

(U//FOUO) WRMVEs Post Veiled Threats to Politicians – Following the January 6th breech of the U.S. Capitol, WRMVEs have identified politicians as one of the greatest enemies. It has been suggested that instead of attending inauguration protests in Washington D.C. on 20 January, "smart ones" would instead exploit the divided attention and attack in other places. It was mentioned that politicians have family outside of Washington D.C. that should be "open for more professional ops". Another post that was shared extensively on WRMVE Telegram channels also commented that these politicians "have homes in your own states" that individuals can loot and burn and "they have families too". Supporters were encouraged to "make the statement loud and clear that WE ARE EVERYWHERE".

(U//FOUO) WRMVEs Suggest Sabotaging Retail Businesses – A WRMVE Telegram Channel posted a message

suggesting that retail businesses be targeted as a means to "collapse their system strategically". The author of the post stated: "In (Minecraft) all major commercial retail businesses are Jewish owned or heavily contribute to the Kike system that enslaves us. Small acts of sabotage over and over can financially ruin huge corporations. Find out who these companies support/employ/donate to and act accordingly. If they cannot operate profitable businesses they will slowly lose control of power". Analyst Note — WRMVEs frequently use 'in Minecraft' as a coded reference for violent or criminal actions that are suggested or intended to take place in the real world.

GNET: Attack dates also have significance for reinforcing the identity of far-right groups, like the ones that stormed the US capital on 6 January 2021

By Dr. Carol Winkler 15th January 2021 In Insights

In the aftermath of the violent political events of 6 January 2021 at the US Capitol, a cascade of governmental officials, political pundits, media commentators, and scholars repeatedly stressed the notion that a President's words matter. The oft-repeated litany of Donald J. Trump calling on his supporters to "stand back and stand by" during a presidential debate, to descend on Washington, D.C. for a "wild" protest on 6 January 2021, and to "not take it any longer" and "fight like hell" immediately before his supporters stormed the US Capitol replayed over and over on traditional media outlets, online news sources, and on social media and culminated in the impeachment of the President.

While the words of national leaders do matter, the dates of planned attacks also have symbolic significance for violent extremist groups and their followers. Dates play an important role in constituting extremist groups, including those that seek to pursue political objectives through violence. Key event dates draw together individuals with common beliefs, attitudes, and behavioural tendencies that might otherwise fail to recognise their affiliation and connection. In short, as Myres (2018) noted, groups "are not born, nor do they die; their fate lies in the redistribution of their name across a network of signifiers." The dates serve as condensation symbols that emphasise the timeless nature of the groups and their ideological perspectives. The historic connections also imply that even if a group suffers temporary setbacks in the contemporary environment, the lasting nature of their identity formation assures ultimate victory (Charland, 1987).

Attacks dates often function as coded references for the ideological underpinnings of extremist groups. On the international stage, al-Qaeda and Islamic State (IS), for example, have planned and/or carried out attacks on Christian religious holidays to underscore the centrality of their Muslim identity. On Christmas day in 2009, al-Qaeda operative Umar Farouk attempted to down a Northwest Airliner travelling to Detroit, Michigan, while IS-inspired militants have carried out fatal attacks on the Berlin Christmas market, Palm Sunday attacks in Tanta, Egypt, and Easter Sunday attacks in Sri Lanka, to name but a few. The religious importance of the Christian holiday attacks draws heightened attention to the vulnerability of collectives that oppose the cause of extremist groups.

Attack dates also have significance for reinforcing the identity of far-right groups, like the ones that stormed the US capital on 6 January 2021. Take, for example, the current FBI warning about upcoming 17 January 2021 planned attacks by the Boogaloo Bois on federal and state capitols (Dickson, 2021). The 17 January date has historical importance to the Boogaloo movement because of the Davis-Coke controversy in 1874. Edmund J. Davis and Richard Coke were political adversaries in the 1873 Texas Gubernatorial contest. Coke, a Democrat who had previously served in the Confederate Fifteenth Texas Infantry and who had voted in the statehouse for the Texas secession from the union, received twice the number of votes in the election as Davis. Yet, Davis barricaded himself in his office and refused to transfer power to Coke because of a state Supreme Court ruling that rejected the election results due to rampant irregularities and fraud on both sides of the electoral contest. Davis requested federal assistance from President Ulysses S. Grant to protect his claim on the governorship, but none was forthcoming. Coke's supporters used ladders to enter the Texas statehouse and axes to breach the Governor's office (as Davis had fled with whiskey). After their successful occupation, the Democrats would go on to control the Texas statehouse for the next century, effectively ending radical reconstruction efforts (Bishop, [n.d.]; Moneyhon, 1980; Noe, 2016).

Using the attack date as a code for the Coke-Davis controversy functions in several important ways to bolster the cause of the Boogaloo Bois. First, it reinforces the contemporary narrative that American elections are rife with fraud and unworthy of their members' trust. Second, it intimates that the court system has long been biased in favour of those who oppose white supremacy, with the implied conclusion that opinions of the course today should not have authoritative sway over group members. Third, it warrants the use of property destruction and forced entry to obtain the group's "just" cause. Fourth, it underscores that with unity, the cause of the Boogaloo movement not only wins the day in the short-term, but proffers the group's dominance for decades to come. Finally, it provides an imaginary anecdote to the certified results of a recent state of Georgia election where a state generally considered to be a lock for conservative causes elected its first Black senator and the first black Democratic senator from a southern state in a US election.

Other dates associated with the planned attacks of far-right support groups of President Trump also demonstrate the need to consider the implications of the attack dates carefully. While the first attack date of 6 January aligned with the certification of the 2020 Presidential election results, it simultaneously recalled when the Three Wisemen visited Jesus particularly for Orthodox Catholic and Anglican Christians. The multiple meanings of the 6 January date signaled the expansion of the fighting coalition likely planning to storm the capitol to evangelical adherents.

What the incidents described here make clear is that those interested in understanding and being able to better predict attacks by extremist groups need to pay special attention to any announced dates of the planned attacks. They should also identify historical dates of significance to extremist groups that might portend attacks even when they are not amplified on social media. Once identified, analysts should look beyond a specified date as a simple rubric for revealing the timing of the intended attack. Such information viewed historically can also give insights into the likely makeup of the coalescing group, the motivations of those participating, and the tactics the group might employ.

Good afternoon COG CDU Subcommittee,

Thank you for everyone who was able to participate in today's CDU Subcommittee Coordination Call. Attached is the meeting summary for your reference.

In addition, a word document of this meeting summary has been uploaded to the 2–534(e). This is a working document – if you have any updates you would like to provide from your agency/jurisdiction, please feel free to do so.

Instructions to access the SharePoint site are also attached – it is highly recommend you use Internet Explorer to fully use the site.

Thank you and please let us know if we can be of any support to you and your colleagues over the coming days.

Best,

DISCUSSION

COG NCRPortal SharePoint Access Instructions v.2

The Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments (COG) NCRPortal SharePoint site houses information for numerous committees behind a password gateway known as IAMS. If COG staff has already informed you that it has granted you access to a site, please follow the directions below.

ACCESS

- 1. Use Internet Explorer (IE) as your browser (other browsers may work fine, especially if just handling PDFs, but IE is necessary for Word and Excel files). To find the IE browser in Windows, go to the Search Bar at lower left and type "IE".
- 2. Visit the direct URL address of the site you are trying to access OR visit 2-534(e)
- 3. Determine if your organization is affiliated with IAMS by consulting the list below:

Entities that Can User Their Existing Employer-Issued Password to Access IAMS (IAMS—Affililated)

Alexandriava.gov
Any federal government domain (too many to list here, but list is at: https://home.dotgov.gov/data/)
Arlingtonva.us
Charlescountymd.gov
Co.manassas.va.us / manassasva.gov
Co.pg.md.us
Dc.gov
Fairfaxcounty.gov
Fairfaxva.gov (City of Fairfax)
Fallschurchva.gov
Frederickcountymd.gov
Gaithersburgmd.gov
Leesburgva.gov
Loudoun.gov
Maryland.gov (certain agencies like MDOT may not work at this time and must register as external users)
Montgomerycountymd.gov
Mwaa.com
Mwcog.org
Nvers.org
Pwcgov.org
Viennava.gov

a. If you do not specifically see your organization (US Federal Government covers most federal agencies, State of Maryland is only good for @maryland.gov address), then your organization is not IAMS-affiliated. You must first establish a password by enrolling in IAMS before trying to log in. You may have received an initial email from IAMS support. It is not necessary to find that email, just visit and reset/create your password before trying to log in. Then return to Step 1 on this list and select "External Users" from the Authentication

Source dropdown list (see screenshot below). If you see your organization on the dropdown list and it is not in the table shown in these instructions on page 1 (ex. City of Frederick, City of Rockville, WMATA) you may select it, but you will still need to use the new IAMS password your just created.

- b. If your organization is on shown in the table on page 1, select it and then select Next.
- 4. Log in with your email address as your username.
- 5. Your password is the one you previously set up in step 3a for "External Users", or your existing government password that you use at your workstation for IAMS-affiliated users.

ISSUES WITH VIEWING WORD AND EXCEL FILES

If you experience any problems viewing Word, Excel or other Microsoft software files, please follow the steps below.

- 1. You must use Internet Explorer as your browser. not (Edge). To find the IE browser in Windows, go to the Search Bar at lower left and type "IE".
- 2. In Internet Explorer, go to Settings (gear icon at top right) > Internet Options > Security Tab > Trusted Sites Icon > Sites Button > make sure 2-534(e) is on the Websites List, or add it.
- 3. Close the browser and reopen it. Reboot the machine if necessary.

Those steps solve the problem for most people. If you are still experiencing an issue with a popup box saying the file is corrupt, follow the steps below.

- 1. Open Excel (also do this for Word if needed).
- 2. Click on File > Options.
- 3. Select Trust Center > Trust center settings.
- 4. Select Protected view.
- 5. Uncheck all the options under Protected View > OK.
- 6. Restart Excel/Word and try to open SharePoint files again.

If that does not help, as a work around, you may be able to right click to the left of the line (the check mark) the file is on in SharePoint, select Download, and then save it to your computer.

Kenya Airways Plans More Pay Cuts Due to Pandemic 01/15/2021

Kenya Airways plans further pay cuts for employees of as much as 30% after the airline was hit by the coronavirus pandemic that has caused a slump in air travel, an internal memo showed on Friday. The latest cuts, of 5% to 30% for workers with monthly earnings exceeding 45,000 shillings ($409), take effect this month and will run for six to 12 months, the company's CEO Allan Kilavuka said in an internal memo seen by Reuters. He said in the memo that the company was grappling with debts which are at an unsustainably high level. Although domestic air travel resumed in Kenya in July, followed by international routes a month later, demand has stayed below pre-pandemic levels.

PIA Plane 'Held Back' by Malaysian Authorities Over UK Court Case 01/15/2021

A Pakistan International Airlines plane has been held back by Malaysian authorities over a British court case, the airline said on Friday, adding that it would pursue the matter through diplomatic channels. The Boeing 777 aircraft was seized after a court order, an airline spokesman said, and alternative arrangements were being made for passengers due to fly back to Pakistan. "A PIA aircraft has been held back by a local court in Malaysia taking a one-sided decision pertaining to a legal dispute between PIA and another party pending in a UK court," a PIA spokesman said in a statement.

First Syrian Plane Since 2011 Lands in Beirut 01/15/2021

A Cham Wings plane flying from Aleppo in Syria, landed at one o'clock after midnight at Beirut's Rafik Hariri International Airport following the restoration of air connectivity at Aleppo airport, the National News Agency reported Friday. The round-trip route was resumed after being halted since Syria's conflict began in 2011. Precautionary measures against the coronavirus were in place, with passengers required to show PCR tests taken less than three days before the flight, according to Syria's state news agency SANA. The head of Syrian Air in Lebanon, Rashed Attar, said the flight arrived in Beirut carrying 36 passengers and returned to Aleppo with 44 passengers. Attar said a weekly flight between Aleppo and Beirut will continue.

Turkey, Greece Expected to Resume Talks at NATO 01/15/2021

Turkish and Greek military delegations are expected to resume technical talks next week at the NATO headquarters, security sources said Friday. The technical talks to discuss maritime disputes between Turkey and Greece were agreed to be held and implemented by the military delegations of the two countries following a meeting held between President Recep Tayyip Erdogan and NATO Secretary General Jens Stoltenberg. Turkey, which has the longest continental coastline in the Eastern Mediterranean, has rejected maritime boundary claims by Greece and the Greek Cypriot administration, stressing that the excessive claims violate the sovereign rights of Turkey and the Turkish Cypriots.

Iran Fires Torpedoes from Homemade Submarine for First Time 01/15/2021

The Iranian naval force fired torpedoes from the home-made Fateh(Conqueror)-class submarine, as well as cruise missiles from the seashore and vessels on the second day of a large-scale drill in the country's southern waters. This is the first time Iran's indigenous submarine has fired torpedoes, reports Xinhua news agency. On Thursday, the cruise missiles and the torpedoes hit mock targets successfully during the last stage of the massive military drill in the Sea of Oman. A foreign submarine was detected approaching the area during the exercise and left the area immediately after a warning was issued, the statement added.

US Blacklists Chinese Firms, Executives Over South China Sea 01/15/2021

The Trump administration imposed fresh sanctions against Chinese firms and military over its "reckless and belligerent actions" in the South China Sea as well as labeled nine companies including Xiaomi as military controlled and added a government oil company to its Entity List. The Commerce Department said it has added China National Offshore Oil Corporation to its import-export Entity list over its combative actions in the South China Sea. In July, U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo announced the United States rejects most of China's maritime claims to the South China Sea, highlighting the United Nations' 2016 ruling that said the Nine-Dash-Line claim has no grounds.

Siemens Mobility Signs Landmark MOU to Install Egypt's First High Speed Rail System 01/15/2021

The National Authority for Tunnels, a governmental authority under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Transport of Egypt, and Siemens Mobility have signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) - together with the local companies Orascom Construction S.A.E. and The Arab Contractors (Osman Ahmed Osman & Co.) - to design, install and commission Egypt's first ever high-speed rail transportation system. Additionally, Siemens Mobility will be providing maintenance services. The agreement comprises a rail system with a network of 1000km, with the first being a 460km high-speed line. The order value of this initial high-speed line is around 3bn$.

Hyundai, Guangzhou District Sign Agreement on HFC Production 01/15/2021

Guangzhou Development District signed an investment cooperative agreement with South Korean automaker Hyundai to set up Hyundai Motor Company HTWO (Guangzhou) on Friday. According to the agreement, the construction of the company, which is 100 percent owned by Hyundai, will officially begin by the end of February with production scheduled to start in the second half of 2022. The new company expects to be able to produce more than 6,500 sets of hydrogen fuel cell systems annually at the preliminary stage, and production will be expanded according to market demands in the future.

Germany Approves Resuming Russia Gas Pipeline Work 01/15/2021

German authorities gave permission Friday for work to resume on a subsea pipeline bringing natural gas from Russia that's been the target of U.S. sanctions threats. The decision by the Federal Maritime and Hydrographic Agency can be appealed, meaning there could be another halt to the construction on the Nord Stream 2 project, which has drawn major criticism from the United States, some other European countries and environmental groups. German Foreign Minister Heiko Maas added that he did not know whether the companies involved in building the pipeline had plans to immediately resume work following the Maritime and Hydrographic Agency's ruling.

COMMERCIAL USE OF SPACE

Blue Origin Aims to Get First Passenger into Space by April 01/15/2021

Jeff Bezos' private space tourism company Blue Origin aims to send its first passenger into the edge of space as early as April this year. The company announced the ambitious goal after it completed the fourteenth test flight of its New Shepard rocket and capsule Thursday. The rocket prototype called the NS-14 successfully flew and landed using the company's newly developed booster and upgraded capsule. The test flight is the last remaining step before the company moves forward to launching a manned rocket. Blue Origin's New Shepard spacecraft is designed to carry passengers to the edge of space - or more than 340,000 feet above sea level. Passengers on board will be able to experience several minutes of zero gravity before the vessel returns back to Earth.

46 Civilians Feared Killed in Eastern Congo Attack 01/14/2021

Forty-six civilians are reported to have been killed in an attack by suspected Islamist militants on a village in eastern Democratic Republic of the Congo, a senior provincial official said Thursday. Local security forces have been dispatched to the village in Irumu territory to investigate, Provincial Interior Minister Adjio Gidi said by phone. He said the Allied Democratic Forces (ADF) were behind the raid. The Ugandan armed group is believed to have carried out a string of massacres in eastern Congo, killing more than 1,000 civilians since the start of 2019, according to U.N. figures. Islamic State has claimed responsibility for many suspected ADF attacks in the past, although U.N. experts have not been able to confirm any direct link between the two groups.

US Charges 14 Leaders of MS-13 Gang with Terrorism 01/14/2021

The United States has charged 14 leaders of the international criminal gang MS-13 on terrorism charges, the U.S. Department of Justice said on Thursday, part of an intensified crackdown on the group. The indictment, filed in Central Islip, New York, and unsealed on Thursday, charged the individuals with conspiracies to support terrorists, commit acts of terrorism and finance terrorism, according to the department. "The indictment announced today is the highest-reaching and most sweeping indictment targeting MS-13 and its command and control structure in U.S. history," acting Attorney General Jeffrey Rosen said in a statement.

CYBER

12,000+ Workers' Personal Data Leaked by UK Staffing Agency 01/14/2021

A recently discovered unsecured Microsoft Azure Blob contained deeply sensitive documents of more than 12,000 construction workers, including scans of passports, national IDs, birth certificates, and tax returns. The cloud storage also contains self-employment contracts that include personally identifiable information such as full names, addresses, UK national insurance numbers, and signatures. The database appears to belong to Nohow International, a UK-based recruitment and staffing agency that provides blue- and white-collar personnel services to companies across the UK and other countries. Presently, it is unclear if any malicious actors have accessed the unsecured Nohow Azure Blob and downloaded the deeply sensitive documents. The files were stored on a publicly accessible Microsoft Azure server. Accessing and downloading files hosted on public servers requires almost no technical knowledge, which means that there's a good chance that the documents contained in this Blob may have been accessed by cybercriminals for malicious purposes.

ADDITIONAL REPORTING

Russia Follows US to Withdraw from Open Skies Treaty 01/15/2021

Russia said Friday it will withdraw from an international treaty allowing observation flights over military facilities following the U.S. exit from the pact. Russia's Foreign Ministry said in a statement that the U.S. withdrawal from the Open Skies Treaty last year "significantly upended the balance of interests of signatory states," adding that Moscow's proposals to keep the treaty alive after the U.S. exit have been cold-shouldered by Washington's allies. The ministry said that Russia is now launching the relevant procedural moves to withdraw from the pact "due to the lack of progress in removing the obstacles for the treaty's functioning in the new conditions."

Dutch Government Resigns Over Childcare Subsidies Scandal 01/15/2021

Prime Minister Mark Rutte announced the resignation of his government on Friday, accepting responsibility for years of mismanagement of childcare subsidies, which wrongfully drove thousands of families to financial ruin. Rutte said he had handed his resignation to King Willem-Alexander. The cabinet would remain in place in a caretaker capacity to manage the coronavirus crisis for now, with an election already due on March 17. The resignation follows a parliamentary inquiry last month that found bureaucrats at the tax service had wrongly accused families of fraud. The inquiry report said around 10,000 families had been forced to repay tens of thousands of euros of subsidies. Many of the families were targeted based on their ethnic origin or dual nationalities, the tax office said last year.

Indonesia Quake Kills At Least 42, Injures Hundreds 01/15/2021

A powerful earthquake killed at least 42 people and injured hundreds on Indonesia's island of Sulawesi on Friday, trapping several under rubble and unleashing dozens of aftershocks as authorities warned of more quakes that could trigger a tsunami. Thousands of frightened residents fled their homes for higher ground when the magnitude 6.2-quake struck 6 km (4 miles) northeast of the town of Majene, at a depth of just 10 km, shortly before 1.30 a.m. The quake and aftershocks damaged more than 300 homes and two hotels, as well as flattening a hospital and the office of a regional governor, where authorities told Reuters several people have been trapped under the rubble. The heightened seismic activity set off three landslides, severed electricity supplies, and damaged bridges linking to regional hubs, such as the city of Makassar. Heavy rain was also worsening conditions for those seeking shelter.

US Patent awarded for broadcast Remote ID (RID)

Ariascend, an Oregon unmanned aircraft systems (UAS) drone research and development company, announced that their CEO, Kenji Sugahara, was recently awarded a patent for broadcast remote identification of drones. The recent FAA announcement of the final rule on Remote Identification of Unmanned Aircraft and the upcoming ASTM standards, cements the patent's applicability and relevance in the industry.

Is this the regulation breakthrough commercial drones need?

- New rules are coming into force this week that will govern how drone operators across EU member states
- More clarity and consistency could pave the way for an acceleration in commercial drone use
- While in Europe, the regulations could serve as a model worldwide in the coming years

One-Handed Controller to Debut at CES 2021

Russian start-up Knuckles-5 has developed a fully one-handed controller for drones and video games that will make its official debut next month at CES 2021. The two traditional joysticks are replaced by two trackballs – one is moved by the index finger, while the other is moved by the thumb. Each trackball controls the drone along two axes of movement. Another two axes are controlled by a thumb-activated mini joystick, while a further two are controlled by an IMU (inertial measurement unit) that detects the direction in which the controller is being tilted. In total the device gives control over eight axes of movement.

FLY-R unveils its new range of UAVs based on the Rhomboidal Wing Configuration

FLY-R SAS unveiled its new corporate image, logo and website. The presentation includes several new FLY-R projects such as the R2-HSTD. The aerodynamics formula of the rhomboidal wing is a technology breakthrough and was largely proven by FLY-R on its R2-150 and R2-240 UAVs. It has now been extended to new models of UAVs up to 6m wingspan.

Sony's Airpeak drone unveiled to the public

Sony launched the Airpeak brand with the goal to further develop today's drone technology while achieving the utmost in value creation. As the first phase of this project, Sony will launch a new business targeted for professional photography and video production in the spring of 2021. In order to fully support the creativity of video creators, the payload of the drone can be equipped with an Alpha™ mirrorless camera to capture high quality, full frame aerial photography and video. Airpeak, the industry's smallest class of drone that can be equipped with the Alpha system, is capable of dynamic filming and precise, stable flight, and aims to contribute to the world of entertainment while also pursuing new possibilities for creative expression.

AUTEL Dragonfish

Autel Robotics today announced that Autel, a world leader in commercial/enterprise unmanned aircraft (drone) and aerial imaging, will release the new Dragonfish flight platform in second quarter, 2021. The fixed-wing aircraft offers a 120 minute flight time, take off/landing in space-restricted areas, rapid deployment/assembly time of under three minutes, and a range of up to 30KM.

CES best of innovation award 2021 Skydio X2

Skydio X2 is the new autonomous drone product from Skydio, leading U.S. drone manufacturer and world leader in autonomous flight. Skydio X2 pairs Skydio's world-leading flight autonomy AI engine with a new ruggedized, foldable airframe and dual optical plus thermal sensor. X2 provides the ultimate aerial data collection solution for situational awareness, asset inspection, security patrol.

Op-Ed: Brian Wynne and Kevin Burke on Remote Identification for Unmanned Systems

Following the publication of the final rule on remote identification for drones last week, the industry has voiced opinions both for and against the concept of Remote ID as well as the actual rule. DRONELIFE is honored to publish this joint op-ed from two of the industry's leading voices: AUVSI President and CEO Brian Wynne, and Kevin Burke, President and CEO of Airports Council International, North America (ACINA.)

New Members Appointed to the Drone Advisory Committee

U.S. Department of Transportation Secretary Elaine L. Chao announced new appointments to the Federal Aviation Administration's (FAA) Drone Advisory Committee or DAC. "The Drone Advisory Committee is key to helping the FAA keep pace with innovation while protecting safety," said U.S. Transportation Secretary Elaine L. Chao. Members are executives who represent a variety of unmanned aircraft systems (UAS) interests, including industry, research, academia, retail, technology, and state and local government.

UAS Emerging Capabilities

Drones That Can Detect Infected Citrus Trees Create New Opportunities in Precision Agriculture

As one of the winners at the most recent press showcases held during the Commercial UAV Expo, Agrowing Ltd., has an established track record when it comes to enabling powerful tools for farmers and growers. The provider of AI-enabling multispectral sensors consistently creates products that set it apart from the competition to enable real opportunities for users. The inherent power and utility of their products was readily apparent in their recent announcement about a significant breakthrough in leaf-level and aerial HLB detection in Citrus.

Drone Technology Extends Reach of Mobile IoT

Drones can be used for a variety of endeavors, from the solemn task of remote warfare to the antics of amateur aviators. But there's a lot more drone activity filling the gap between military tool and hobbyist toys as enterprises have begun to appreciate the operational and economic benefits of drone-enabled functions.

Variously referred to as unmanned aerial vehicles (UAV) or unmanned aircraft systems (UAS), drones are uniquely able to explore and report on locations that may be inaccessible via other means. In an IoT setting, a drone could act as a mobile sensor to gather data and relay it back to a cloud app or some other analytics service.

Pineapple waste used to build disposable drones

Researchers in Malaysia have developed a method to transform the fibre found in normally discarded pineapple leaves to make a strong material that can be used to build the frames for unmanned aircraft, e.g. drones.

Draganfly Patents Variable Center of Gravity for VTOL Delivery Drones

Draganfly Inc. has announced the awarding of a new patent for a vertical take-off and landing (VTOL) cargo delivery drone with variable center of gravity. The design is ideal for Beyond Visual Line of Sight (BVLOS) and for transporting goods in hard to reach areas or flight over people at night.

Dubai Tech Company Develops Magnetic Shield C-UAS System

Cusp Technologies, a Dubai-based tech solutions company, has developed a new system for using magnetic beams in many applications specially in defense and space. One of its main applications is to repel hostile drone attacks.

French Drone Maker Unleashes Autonomous Swarm Concept at CES 2021

During CES 2021, French drone manufacturer Icarus Swarms announced a new UAS product line targeting security and emergency first-response industries. A company spokesperson says the new line is "based on a pioneering technology using intelligent pathfinding algorithms and microdrones coordinated in a swarm."

How AI and connectivity could unlock a new drone age for the industry

The ability to fly connected drones "beyond visual line of sight" on automated missions could transform many business operations, experts believe. Today, if you want to inspect a building site or other installation with a drone you need a pilot standing nearby to keep an eye on the craft at all times and control it over a radio connection.

But, according to John McKenna, chief executive of sees.ai, a tech company working on how drones can be operated remotely using artificial intelligence, this means that a pilot "has to drive to the site, go through a health and safety induction before flying, and then after flying, pack up and drive back to the office." This "wastes a lot of time", he says, and is preventing drones from fulfilling their potential as useful monitors inspecting places that are difficult or dangerous for humans to reach. So his company is working on a project with Tokyo-based TerraDrone, and with Vodafone as technical partner, to see how drones could be operated remotely "beyond visual line of sight" (BVLOS) without compromising safety.

Red Cat partners with Skypersonic Completes Long Distance Drone Flight Remotely

Red Cat Holdings, Inc. (OTCQB: RCAT) ("Red Cat" or the "Company"), a leading brand in the drone industry, announced that Fat Shark, a wholly-owned subsidiary, had partnered with Skypersonic, the manufacturer of the Skycopter UAV, to complete a long-distance drone flight remotely. The flight consisted of a pilot, located in Orlando, Florida, controlling a drone flying in Detroit, Michigan. The flight integrated Fat Shark's new digital technology, "Shark Byte" with Skypersonic's Skycopter and remote pilot software system. The pilot's flight instructions to the drone were transmitted through Skypersonic's servers located in Italy. The companies believe this represents the first commercial completion of a remote flight similar to how drones are used by military forces.

Drones could become the future of quantum internet

Researchers have managed to use drones to transmit light particles across large distances to transmit information. A team from the Nanjing University in China has transmitted data using drones over a one-kilometer (0.62 miles) distance. The paper released onto APS.org states that entanglement distribution has been achieved by flying a drone with a transmitter to send out entangled photons.

When a proton is entangled, no matter the distance between them, the other will perform a predicted behavior if something happens to one. Once this drone is up, another drone takes to the sky, equipped with an optical relay in it at about 0.62 miles away. This relay also reshapes the wavefront of photons, which is best explained when a rock is dropped into the water and it creates waves that spread out along the surface of the water in all directions with the same velocity.

The end goal for the researchers and scientists involved in the project is to have a mesh network of these drones in the air transmitting, receiving, and relaying data to create a network that could spread over the whole world, without the need for a large amount of ground infrastructure.

Researchers can now keep drones flying when a motor fails

Researchers at the University of Zurich and the Delft University of Technology have been able to keep a drone flying after a motor fails. The researchers have managed to use onboard cameras to keep the test drones in the air and flying safely.

This Lynchpin Contest drone has astonishing flight abilities

We always enjoy coming across a drone that has new capabilities. And we've never seen a drone like this one. A friend sent a text. Check out this video, it said. There was a YouTube link. I clicked. A weird-looking drone popped into view. But then that drone began doing things that appeared nearly impossible. It was rolling while maintaining position. It was flying in ways I'd never before seen – so it clearly had my attention. In a moment, I think it will have yours.

Tinamu Labs Showcases the Potential of Automated Indoor Drone Applications at CES 2021

Tinamu replaces large static sensor networks that consist of numerous fixed cameras with one flying sensor. Their drone-based inspection automation solution consists of a dashboard that visualizes relevant information, analytics software running on a secured cloud, and the drone system connected to a communication network. Their commercial drone use cases detail how the technology is being used for conveyor belt inspections, in warehouses and for infrastructure inspections.

UAS Policy

Tighter weapon controls to cover armed drones, 3D-printed guns

A proposed law on guns, explosives and weapons discussed in Parliament yesterday aims to further tighten controls and strengthen penalties for high-risk items such as automatic weapons. The changes also aim to address new threats posed by technology shifts, such as 3D-printed guns and drones mounted with weapons.

Florida Senate bill seeks expanded use of drones

A bill filed Monday in the Florida Senate would allow law enforcement to use drones to monitor large crowds, assist with traffic control and collect crime-scene evidence.

Sen. Tom Wright, a New Smyrna Beach Republican who chairs the Senate Military and Veterans Affairs, Space and Domestic Security Committee, is sponsoring the bill (SB 44), which would expand the allowed uses of unmanned aircraft so law enforcement would be able to get aerial perspectives of crowds topping 50 people.

Army announces release of DoD Counter-Small UAS Strategy

Department of Defense leadership recently approved a new strategy to lead and direct Counter-Small Unmanned Aircraft Systems (C-sUAS) activities across the Department. This strategy will provide the framework for addressing sUAS hazards and threats in a variety of operating environments, including the U.S. homeland, host nations, and contingency locations.

More Shots Fired in U.S. – China Tech War, Implications for Commercial Drone Industry

On January 5, 2021, the President signed Executive Order (EO) 13971, Addressing the Threat Posed by Applications and Other Software Developed or Controlled by Chinese Companies, which prohibits persons subject to the jurisdiction of the United States (U.S. citizens/residents and corporations) from transacting with persons that develop or control Chinese connected software applications or their subsidiaries. These prohibitions kick in 45 days from publication.

UAS Incidents and Events

Smaller, cheaper drones have outsized impact on the future of war

Azerbaijan's successful use of drones during its recent war with Armenia, specialists say, has captured the attention of military leaders around the world and accelerated a move toward a generation of unmanned aerial vehicles that are smaller, cheaper and easier to operate.

Even the leaders of major Western military powers such as Britain have signaled a coming shift in their drone strategies after watching Azerbaijani aircraft rain destruction on Armenian troops and traditional ground combat vehicles during the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict this fall.

NYPD, US Army, carried out drone detection trials in NYC

The ability to detect drones is important. And, over the course of two nights last fall, a division of the NYPD carried out an ambitious exercise designed to test multiple drone detection technologies. We like to think all drone operators are responsible, but we know that's not the case. We've all seen stories about drones delivering contraband to prisons, flying where they shouldn't, and even disrupting major sporting events. So there are plenty of good (and bad) reasons why police in a major city might want to ensure they have the ability to quicky and accurately detect drones. That's precisely what this exercise was about.

Drone pilot pleads guilty to chopper collision; could face one year in prison

In what appears to be a first, a drone pilot has pleaded guilty to colliding his drone into a Los Angeles Police Department helicopter. It's believed to be the first criminal conviction in the United States for unsafe operation of an unmanned aircraft.

Subject: [EXTERNAL EMAIL] - RE: <External>RE: [Non-DoD Source] Intelligence Subcommittee Meeting

Thank you sir. We'll brief out as well. Please see below:

Metro will alter both bus and rail service schedules beginning Friday, January 15th through Thursday, January 21st.

Beginning with the start of rail service on Friday, January 15th through close of service on Thursday, January 21st, all trains will bypass 11 stations that are closed inside the perimeter. Two more stations – Metro Center and Gallery Place – will close Saturday, January 16th through Thursday, January 21st. Beginning on Saturday, January 16th through Thursday, January 21st, trains will operate on a Saturday schedule (every 15 mins. on all lines/every 12 mins. on Red) every day, bypassing all closed stations since residents are urged by local officials to stay out of the downtown core.

Rail station closures by line include:

Red	Yellow/Green	Blue	Blue/Orange/Silver
Farragut North	Archives-Navy Memorial	Arlington Cemetery	Farragut West
Judiciary Square			McPherson Square
Union Station			Federal Center SW
Metro Center*			Capitol South
Gallery Place*			Smithsonian
			Federal Triangle

(*Closing Saturday)

During this time, 26 bus routes will be detoured around the expanded security perimeter. Outside the perimeter, the level of bus service will remain normal on weekdays and weekends. However, on Wednesday, January 20th, all buses will operate on a Saturday schedule. Additional station closures and bus detours may be necessary on a temporary basis during this period for security reasons.

Subject: [EXTERNAL EMAIL] - RE: <External>RE: [Non-DoD Source] Intelligence Subcommittee Meeting

Thank you sir. We'll brief out as well. Please see below:

Metro will alter both bus and rail service schedules beginning Friday, January 15th through Thursday, January 21st.

Beginning with the start of rail service on Friday, January 15th through close of service on Thursday, January 21st, all trains will bypass 11 stations that are closed inside the perimeter. Two more stations – Metro Center and Gallery Place – will close Saturday, January 16th through Thursday, January 21st. Beginning on Saturday, January 16th through Thursday, January 21st, trains will operate on a Saturday schedule (every 15 mins. on all lines/every 12 mins. on Red) every day, bypassing all closed stations since residents are urged by local officials to stay out of the downtown core.

Rail station closures by line include:

Red	Yellow/Green	Blue	Blue/Orange/Silver
Farragut North	Archives-Navy Memorial	Arlington Cemetery	Farragut West
Judiciary Square			McPherson Square
Union Station			Federal Center SW
Metro Center*			Capitol South
Gallery Place*			Smithsonian

(*Closing Saturday)

During this time, 26 bus routes will be detoured around the expanded security perimeter. Outside the perimeter, the level of bus service will remain normal on weekdays and weekends. However, on Wednesday, January 20th, all buses will operate on a Saturday schedule. Additional station closures and bus detours may be necessary on a temporary basis during this period for security reasons.

- (U) United States: 'We're all on high alert': Delta to Ban Checked Firearms, Increase Security On Flights to DC
- (U) Starting this weekend, Delta Air Lines CEO Ed Bastian said the airline will ban passengers traveling to Washington, D.C., from checking firearms as part of increased security measures ahead of the inauguration. "We're all on high alert based on the events over the last couple of weeks up in Washington," Bastian said in an interview on CNBC early Thursday. Only law enforcement officials will be exempt from the ban. Bastian said the airline will also add other security measures at the airports and on planes seen and unseen in the coming days "as we look to the week ahead."

- (U) United States: FAA Toughens Unruly Passenger Policy After Flight Disruptions in Wake of Capitol Riot
- (U) The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) will begin handing down stricter punishments to unruly airline passengers without a warning, including "fines of up to $35,000 and imprisonment." FAA Administrator Steve Dickson signed the order Wednesday directing the agency to take a "zero tolerance policy" in unruly passenger cases after the agency saw a "disturbing increase in incidents" of passengers disrupting flights with "threatening or violent behavior." "Historically, the agency has addressed unruly passenger incidents using a variety of methods ranging from warnings and counseling to civil penalties," the FAA said in a news release. "Effective immediately, however, the FAA will not address these cases with warnings or counseling. The agency will pursue legal enforcement action against any passenger who assaults, threatens, intimidates or interferes with airline crew members." The FAA's new policy will remain in effect through March 30.

(U) United States: DC Metro to Close 13 Stations for A Week Amid Threats of Inauguration Violence

(U) Metro will shut down more than a dozen stations near the U.S. Capitol and Mall for days around the presidential inauguration because of the possibility of violent protests. Starting Friday, the transit agency will begin closing 13 stations through the following Thursday, the day after President-elect Joe Biden is inaugurated on the steps of the Capitol. Metrobus service and routes also will be adjusted around a security perimeter guarded by fences and an expected 20,000 members of the National Guard. The transit precautions were made through coordination with the Secret Service, which is directing safety of the event after last week's attempted insurrection and riot at the U.S. Capitol that left five dead and wounded several others.

(U) United States: Capitol Investigators Try to Sort Real Tips from Noise

(U) Potential threats and leads are pouring in to law enforcement agencies nationwide after the insurrection at the U.S. Capitol. The challenge is now figuring out what's real and what's just noise. Investigators are combing through a mountain of online posts, street surveillance and other intelligence, including information that suggests mobs could try to storm the Capitol again and threats to kill some members of Congress. Security is being tightened from coast to coast. Thousands of National Guard troops are guarding the Capitol ahead of President-elect Joe Biden's inauguration. Governors and lawmakers are stepping up protections at statehouses after an FBI bulletin this week warned of threats to legislative sessions and other inaugural ceremonies. A primary concern is the safety of members of Congress, particularly when they are traveling through airports, according to two U.S. officials briefed on the matter. Since last week, the FBI has opened 170 case files and received more than 100,000 pieces of digital media. The threats have ranged in specificity and complexity, according to officials briefed on them, making it difficult for authorities to determine which could be credible.

(U) United States, NY: Proud Boys Fan Stockpiled Ammo, Knives in NY Home: FBI

(U) A Proud Boys supporter who threatened to deploy "three cars full of armed patriots" to Washington last week was charged Wednesday with stockpiling military-style combat knives and more than 1,000 rifle rounds in his New York home, federal authorities said. Eduard Florea,

40, was charged with possessing ammunition as a convicted felon and denied bail after the FBI searched his Queens home and interviewed him about a series of threats about the deadly siege on the U.S. Capitol they said he made on the social network Parler. Prosecutors said the software engineer vowed to travel to the nation's capital and slice "a throat" at the Jan. 6 riot by supporters of President Donald Trump. Another post attributed to Florea threatened the life of U.S. Sen.-elect Raphael Warnock of Georgia, authorities said. "The time for peace and civility is over," Florea wrote, according to a criminal complaint. "I will be reaching out to patriots in my area so we can come up with a game plan." Assistant U.S. Attorney Francisco J. Navarro said Florea posed a flight risk and is "particularly dangerous in the current political environment." He said Florea applied to join the Proud Boys, a far-right group, but was not yet a member because he had not attended the requisite number of meetings. He said Florea traveled to Washington in December and was with the group when it vandalized a church. U.S. Magistrate Judge Sanket Bulsara ordered Florea held without bail, saying the evidence suggested "a premediated plan to exact violence against people in New York and people in Washington."

(U) United States: Coast Guard to Establish, Enforce Multiple Security Zones for the 59th Presidential Inauguration

(U) The Coast Guard will enforce three temporary security zones in the National Capital Region for the 59th Presidential Inauguration, beginning at 8 a.m., on January 13 and ending 8 a.m., January 25, 2021. During the enforcement period, entry into or remaining in the zones is prohibited by law, unless authorized by the Coast Guard Captain of the Port of Maryland-National Capital Region. Persons or vessel violating this section may be subject to civil or criminal penalties pursuant to 46 U.S.C. 70036. The Coast Guard is establishing the security zones as described in Title 33 Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) §165.508. The Coast Guard will establish a security zone encompassing certain waters of the Potomac River and Anacostia River, and adjacent waters in Washington D.C. The Coast Guard may be assisted by other federal, state or local law enforcement agencies in enforcing this regulation. The U.S. Secret Service is the lead federal agency for this National Special Security Event.

(U) United States: Passengers Banned from U.S. Airlines Top 2,700, With Dozens Added in Wake of Capitol Riot

(U) During an Alaska Airlines flight from Washington, D.C. to Seattle last week, a number of passengers refused to wear masks and harassed crew members, the airline said. In response, Alaska banned 14 of the passengers on that Thursday flight — just some of a growing number of disruptive passengers' airlines are putting on their own no-fly lists. And now the Federal Aviation Administration has announced it will start taking legal action over such behavior going forward. Calling those passengers "rowdy" and "argumentative," Alaska Airlines said in a statement it has banned more than 300 passengers since August for violating its mask policy.

(U) United States: U.S. Border Closure Extended to Feb. 21

(U) The land borders between the United States, Canada and Mexico will remain closed to nonessential travel until at least Feb. 21. U.S. Homeland Security announced the U.S.-Mexico-border closure extension on Tuesday. Commercial trucks will continue to move freely across the borders, as the movement of essential goods remains exempt from the restrictions. "We are working closely with Mexico & Canada to keep essential trade & travel open while also protecting our citizens from the virus," DHS said in a tweet. "DHS is working closely with our counterparts in Mexico and Canada to identify appropriate public health conditions to safely ease restrictions in the future and support U.S. border communities." Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau also announced Tuesday another 30-day extension of the closure of Canada's border with the U.S. until Feb. 21. The borders have been closed for nonessential travel since March to slow the spread of COVID-19.

(U) Uganda: Uganda Orders Internet Blackout Until Further Notice

(U) Uganda's communications regulator ordered telecoms operators in the country to suspend all internet gateways from Wednesday evening until further notice, South African telecoms company MTN Group said. The blackout came on the eve of a presidential election in which long-time leader Yoweri Museveni is facing an opposition galvanized by popular singer Bobi Wine, despite a campaign marked by brutal crackdowns. Ugandans reported difficulties accessing the internet via mobile devices and wireless connections on Wednesday evening and internet monitor NetBlocks said on Twitter that the country was experiencing a nationwide blackout from 7 p.m. (1600 GMT). "I can confirm that MTN Uganda and all Licensed Telecommunication Operators in the country have received a directive from Uganda Communications Commission (UCC) to implement a suspension of the operation of all internet Gateways and associated access points," Nompilo Morafo, MTN's group executive for corporate affairs told Reuters. The internet ban came day after Uganda banned all social media and messaging apps ahead of the vote, which the president said was in retaliation for Facebook taking down some pro-government accounts.

(U) Worldwide: Ship Insurers Primed to Raise Rates After Red Sea Attacks

(U) Insurers are set to raise the cost of providing cover for merchant ships through the Red Sea after a series of incidents that have hit vessels around Saudi Arabian waters, industry sources said. The possibility of more attacks on commercial shipping carrying oil and commodities through these waterways is growing after the outgoing U.S. administration's move to designate Yemen's Iran-aligned Houthi movement as a foreign terrorist organization. "We are seeing increased rates for vessels making port calls in the Red Sea due to concerns over risk of attack by militia groups, whereas previously this was of an issue of more concern in the Arabian Gulf," said Mike Ingham with insurance broker Gallagher. "This will be impacting vessels travelling to Red Sea ports such as Jeddah." Every ship needs various forms of insurance, including annual war-risk cover as well as an additional "breach" premium when entering high-risk areas. These separate premiums are calculated according to the value of the ship, or hull, for a seven-day period. "The real debate is on the Red Sea side after the incidents involving explosive devices. Everyone is watching what happens next," one war underwriter said. The Red Sea is one of the world's busiest shipping lanes leading up to the Suez Canal, with thousands of transits made annually through the Bab al-Mandab waterway at its southern tip.

(U) New Zealand: New Zealand to Review Parliament Security After Door Attack

(U) Officials plan to review security at New Zealand's Parliament after a man armed with an axe smashed the main glass entrance doors early Wednesday. Police said they were called to the Parliament complex in Wellington just before 5:30 a.m. after getting reports that a man with an axe was on the grounds. Police said that after smashing the doors, the 31-year-old man didn't try to enter the building and was arrested within minutes without further incident. New Zealand's 120 lawmakers are currently on a summer break, and there were few people in the building at the time of the attack. The man has been charged with intentional damage and possession of an offensive weapon. If found guilty, he could face up to seven years in prison. A judge temporarily suppressed the man's name, a common practice in New Zealand's justice system. It was not immediately clear whether the recent attacks at the U.S. Capitol in Washington played any role in inspiring the New Zealand attack.

NOAA WEATHER OUTLOOK Today through Sunday, January 17, 2021

Today: Friday, January 15, 2021

Heavy Snow (Northwest, Upper Midwest, Northeast); Blizzard Conditions (Central Plains, Upper Midwest); Freezing Rain (Northwest, Northeast, Central Appalachians); Critical Fire Weather (Southern California, Southern Plains); High Winds (Plains)

- As an area pf high pressure moves eastward into New Brunswick Canada, low pressure will progress into southern Wisconsin. A cold front will extend from the low thru the Ohio River Valley and into the Gulf of Mexico after passing thru western portion of Florida peninsula. A warm front will mark the leading edge of warm, moist air that will override a stubborn cold air mass over the Northeast.
 - Rain showers will occur from Florida to the New England maritime.
 - Mixed rain and snow will fall across much of the Tennessee River Valley, and thru the Great Lakes and into southern Ontario and northern New England. Snow is possible for some areas near the Canadian border, especially for northern Maine.
 - In colder air to the west, areas from North Dakota to the middle Mississippi River Valley will see snow, with some of it being heavy, especially across southern Minnesota and northern Iowa.
 - Freezing rain is possible for portions of the central Appalachians and upstate New York.
 - Winds behind the cold front will be gusty leading to elevated fire weather conditions across much of the Southern Plains. Winds will also be strong across much of the Central Plains, especially in the Missouri River Valley, leading to blizzard conditions.
- Meanwhile, in the Far West, high pressure will build across the northern Great Basin as a frontal system edges its way onshore in the Northwest.
 - Snow is possible across the Tetons and higher terrain of Wyoming and I-80 corridor from northern Utah into Cheyenne Ridge.
 - Rain showers will be prevalent from Vancouver to northern California.
 - Mixed rain and snow will fall across much of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and western Montana. Some of the higher valleys of Washington could see freezing rain.
 - As winds increase and relative humidity levels decrease across southern California, one can expect elevated to critical fire weather conditions for southern California. This will continue into Sunday at least.

Tomorrow: Saturday, January 16, 2021

Low pressure will move from southern Wisconsin to Lower Michigan. The occluded front will extend from it to northern New Jersey. A cold front will drop south across the open waters of the west Atlantic, slicing across the Bahamas and Cuba.

- Mixed wintry precipitation will be found across the eastern Great Lakes, Northeast,
 New England, Ohio River Valley and much of the central and northern Appalachians.
- Some areas of upstate New York, especially near Lake Champlain, as well as the Green and White Mountains of New Hampshire and Maine, will see some heavy snow with accumulations over 6 inches.
- A few rain showers are likely for parts of the central Northeast coastal region.

Fair and dry weather on tap for the Great Plains, Mississippi River Valley and the South.

A combo of weather systems will slide across the western Central Plains, one in the Black Hills region of South Dakota and the other over southeast Colorado.

Snow will develop across the central Rockies and adjacent High Plains.

Elsewhere, weak low pressure will move into the Northwest as high pressure remains across the Great Basin.

- Additionally, rain and higher elevation snow expected for the Cascades and Olympic ranges.
- Offshore flow will lead to continued critical fire weather conditions across southern California.

Day 3: Sunday, January 17, 2021

Low pressure will reside over southern Quebec with a cold front extending from it across the Northeast and Great Lakes.

- Mixed wintry precipitation will fall across the Ohio River Valley.
- Light snow showers will be widespread from Upper Midwest to southern Great Lakes and Northeast.
- It will be quite windy in the Appalachians as troughs pass through the area.

Weak storm systems will bring some snow across the northern Rockies and Northern Plains, as well as some mixed rain and snow from eastern Washington to eastern Montana.

Frontal system will move into Northwest US with rain showers from Vancouver to southwest Oregon as the result. Elevated to critical fire weather conditions will likely continue into late Sunday for southern California.

CISA launches new effort to develop actionable metrics to quantify cyber risk < Caution-

The Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA) has launched a new cybersecurity effort: The Systemic Cyber Risk Reduction Venture on developing actionable metrics to quantify cyber risk. This information will be used to reduce shared risk to the nation's security. The effort, in partnership with the National Risk Management Center (NRMC), CISA will be focusing on using enterprise risk management best practices in 2021. According to Bob Kolasky, CISA Assistant Director for the National Risk Management Center, CISA is anticipating three overarching lines of effort.

CISA Warns of Cloud Attacks Exploiting Poor Cyber-Hygiene < Caution-https://www.infosecurity-

magazine.com/news/cisa-warns-of-cloud-attacks-poor/ > (01/14) Info-Security Magazine

A US cybersecurity agency is urging organizations to improve their cyber-hygiene after warning of multiple successful attacks targeting cloud services used by remote workers. The Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA) revealed in a report yesterday that attackers are increasingly targeting corporate and personal laptops with phishing, brute force login attempts and possibly a "pass-the-cookie" attack to access cloud accounts. Although these attacks were not tied back to a single threat actor, they shared many of the same tactics.

CISA: Hackers bypassed MFA to access cloud service accounts < Caution-

https://www.securitymagazine.com/articles/94346-cisa-hackers-bypassed-mfa-to-access-cloud-service-accounts > (01/14) Security Magazine

In a new alert, the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA) announced that it is aware of several recent successful cyberattacks against various organizations' cloud services. Threat actors are using phishing and other vectors to exploit poor cyber hygiene practices within a victims' cloud services configuration. These types of attacks frequently occurred when victim organizations' employees worked remotely and used a mixture of corporate laptops and personal devices to access their respective cloud services.

Can agencies comply with CISA's demands? < Caution-

https://federalnewsnetwork.com/cybersecurity/2021/01/can-agencies-comply-with-cisas-demands/ > (01/14) FederalNews Network

Federal agencies – and there are several of them at least – affected by the SolarWinds cybersecurity fiasco are under a new deadline. Days ago policy from the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency gives them to the end of the month to complete forensic analysis and to harden their systems. Michael Hamilton questions whether this will be even possible, as he told Federal Drive with Tom Temin. He's the former vice chairman of the DHS Coordinating Council, now the chief information security officer at CI security.

CISA: Poor Cyber Hygiene Exploited to Compromise Cloud Security Services < Caution-

https://healthitsecurity.com/news/cisa-poor-cyber-hygiene-exploited-to-compromise-cloud-security-services > (01/14) HealthITSecurity

Threat actors are successfully exploiting organizations with poor cyber hygiene to compromise cloud security services, according to a new Department of Homeland Security Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency alert. CISA is aware of multiple, recent cyberattacks against a range of enterprise cloud services. Hackers are leveraging various tactics and techniques, such as phishing attacks and brute force login attempts, in an effort to exploit weaknesses in cloud security practices.

Cloud Attacks Are Bypassing MFA, Feds Warn < Caution-https://threatpost.com/cloud-attacks-bypass-mfa-feds/163056/ > (01/14) Threatpost CISA has issued an alert warning that cloud services at U.S. organizations are being actively and successfully targeted. The Feds are warning that cybercriminals are bypassing multi-factor authentication (MFA) and successfully attacking cloud services at various U.S. organizations. According to an alert issued Wednesday by the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA), there have been "several recent successful cyberattacks" focused on compromising the cloud. Most of the attacks are opportunistic, taking advantage of poor cloud cyber-hygiene and misconfigurations, according to the agency.

US government warns of cyberattacks targeting cloud services < Caution-

https://www.techrepublic.com/article/us-government-warns-of-cyberattacks-targeting-cloud-services/ > (01/14) Tech Republic

Organizations with remote workers who use cloud-based services are being warned of several recent successful cyberattacks against those services. In an advisory issued on Wednesday, CISA (Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency) revealed that hackers have been employing successful phishing campaigns, brute force login attempts, and potentially pass-the-cookie attacks to exploit weaknesses in cloud security practices. In a pass-the-cookie attack, hackers steal cookies from a user's browsing session so they can then access a certain site as the victim.

Cyber criminals bypassing MFA to access cloud service accounts < Caution-https://www.itpro.co.uk/security/two-factor-authentication-2fa/358323/cyber-criminals-bypassing-mfa-to-access-cloud-service > (01/14) ITPro

The US Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA) has warned organizations that hackers are bypassing multi-factor authentication (MFA) protocols to breach cloud service accounts. In a report, the CISA said it was aware of several recent successful cyber attacks against various organizations' cloud services. Hackers used "phishing and other vectors to exploit poor cyber hygiene practices within a victims' cloud services configuration."

CISA says multiple attacks on cloud services bypassed multifactor authentication < Caution-

https://www.scmagazine.com/home/security-news/cloud-security/cisa-says-multiple-attacks-on-cloud-services-bypassed-multifactor-authentication/ > (01/14) SC Magazine

The Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA) on Wednesday said it discovered several recent successful cyberattacks against the cloud services of multiple organizations, offering guidance on how security teams can bolster associated security. CISA said in its report that threat actors have used a variety of tactics and techniques—including phishing, brute force login attempts, and possibly a so-called "pass-the-cookie" attack that bypassed multifactor authentication to exploit cloud security weaknesses.

CISA tells agencies to consider and blockers to fend off 'malvertising' < Caution-

https://www.cyberscoop.com/ad-blockers-security-nsa-dhs-wyden/?category_news=government > (01/14) Cyberscoop

The U.S. Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency urged federal agencies on Thursday to deploy ad-blocking software and standardize web browser usage across their workforces in order to fend off advertisements implanted with malware. "With many agencies greatly expanding telework options, agencies should increase attention on securing federal endpoints, including associated web browsing capabilities," the Department of Homeland Security's cyber arm said in a guide for agencies.

COVID-19

The Covid-19 Death Toll Is Even Worse Than It Looks < Caution-https://www.wsj.com/articles/the-covid-19-death-toll-is-even-worse-than-it-looks-11610636840 > (01/14) The Wall Street Journal

The recorded death count from the Covid-19 pandemic as of Thursday is nearing 2 million. The true extent is far worse. More than 2.8 million people have lost their lives due to the pandemic, according to a Wall Street Journal analysis of data from 59 countries and jurisdictions. This tally offers the most comprehensive view yet of the pandemic's global impact. Deaths in these places last year surged more than 12% above average levels. Less than two-thirds of that surge has been attributed directly to Covid-19. Public-health experts believe that many, if not most, of the additional deaths were directly linked to the disease, particularly early in the pandemic when testing was sparse.

'We Cannot Afford Inaction': Biden Unveils $1.9 Trillion COVID-19 Relief Plan < Caution-

 $https://www.npr.org/sections/biden-transition-updates/2021/01/14/956804924/biden-to-unveil-1-9-trillion-covid-19-relief-plan-including-1-400-stimulus-check > {01/14} \, NPR$

President-elect Joe Biden outlined his plans for economic relief from the coronavirus crisis on Thursday, citing the need for a more robust vaccination plan as well as for additional direct payments to American families to help recover the U.S. economy. His plan, called the American Rescue Plan, is expected to cost $1.9 trillion. The package includes $1,400 direct stimulus checks, which would supplement the $600 checks Congress passed late last year. Biden also proposes an additional $160 billion for a national vaccine program, including $20 billion for distribution, and an additional $50 billion for expanded testing.

CRITICAL INFRASTRUCTURE

Cybersecurity and "Recognized Security Practices": New Statute modifies HIPAA < Caution-https://www.natlawreview.com/article/cybersecurity-and-recognized-security-practices-new-statute-modifies-hipaa > (01/14) National Law Review

On January 5, 2020, President Trump signed into law H.R. 7898. This new statute amends the Health Information Technology for Economic and Clinical Health (HITECH) Act to require the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) to consider efforts by HIPAA covered entities and business associates to implement "recognized security practices" when assessing fines or penalties under the HIPAA Security Rule.

DHS Unveils Strategic Approach to Safeguard Critical Infrastructure, Supply Chain From Chinese

Threats < Caution-https://www.govconwire.com/2021/01/dhs-unveils-strategic-approach-to-safeguard-critical-infrastructure-supply-chain-from-chinese-threats/ > (01/14) GovConWire

The Department of Homeland Security has created a strategy outlining its measures to address threats Chinese activity poses to the U.S.' immigration, critical infrastructure and cybersecurity, trade and maritime defense operations.DHS said

Wednesday its Strategic Action Plan applies input from the department's China Working Group and the department intends to continue its partnership with key stakeholders to confront national security challenges.

SOLARWINDS

Some UW Campuses That Contract With SolarWinds IT Provider Exploited in National Cyberattack < Caution-https://www.wpr.org/some-uw-campuses-contract-solarwinds-it-provider-exploited-national-cyberattack > (01/15) Wisconsin Public Radio

The national cyberattack that targeted the SolarWinds computer network monitoring software could have impacted some University of Wisconsin System campuses that use it. In mid-December, news broke that a massive computer breach gave hackers months to sift through United States government computer networks. It's been reported that cybersecurity experts believe the hack was carried out by Russia's foreign intelligence service known as the SVR.

Cybersecurity firm identifies third SolarWinds hack malware strain < Caution-

https://www.foxbusiness.com/technology/cybersecurity-firm-third-malware-strain-solarwinds-hack > (01/14) Fox Business

One of the cybersecurity firms investigating the SolarWinds attack said it has identified a third malware strain involved in the hack. Security firm CrowdStrike identified and named the strain Sunspot, adding that the strain was also the first one used of the three -- the other two are called Sunburst and Teardrop. Sunspot was planted on the SolarWinds build server, creating the opening for Sunburst to first enter the system, according to Crowdstrike's report.

SolarWinds Cyber-Attack Has Significant Implications for Developers and Contractors < Caution-

https://www.natlawreview.com/article/solarwinds-cyber-attack-has-significant-implications-developers-and-contractors > (01/14) National Law Review

ICYMI, on Wednesday, January 6, 2021, the United States Department of Justice (DOJ) issued an update about what it termed "a major incident under the Federal Information Security Modernization Act": the global SolarWinds cyberattack that had compromised its email system. (SolarWinds is a software provider. In December, 2020, SolarWinds revealed that cybercriminals had injected malware into its Orion® Platform software, a platform used for centralized IT monitoring and management.

SolarWinds Hack Could Cost Cyber Insurance Firms $90 Million < Caution-

https://www.crn.com/news/security/solarwinds-hack-could-cost-cyber-insurance-firms-90-million > (01/14) CRNCyber insurance vendors are expected to spend $90 million on incident response and forensic services for clients who were compromised by the SolarWinds hackers. "Although the SolarWinds attack is a cyber catastrophe from a national security perspective, insurers may have narrowly avoided a catastrophic financial incident to their businesses," said Samit Shah, director of insurance programs and partnerships for Boston-based cyber risk vendor BitSight.

Capitol Hill riot crackdown leaves extremists searching for more secure messaging platforms, US intel memo says < Caution-https://www.cyberscoop.com/capitol-hill-riot-extremists-intelligence-bulletin-encryption/ > (01/14)

CyberScoop

A law enforcement crackdown on domestic terrorists following the Capitol Hill riot will likely lead some violent extremists to turn to communications platforms they perceive to be more secure to discuss their activities, according to a U.S. intelligence bulletin obtained by CyberScoop. The arrests of Jan. 6 rioters could deter some domestic violent extremists (DVEs), but "lead others to adjust their tactics and to lessen law enforcement scrutiny," says the Jan. 13 memo from the Department of Homeland Security, FBI and the National Counterterrorism Center.

NSA advises companies to avoid third party DNS resolvers < Caution-https://www.bleepingcomputer.com/news/security/nsa-advises-companies-to-avoid-third-party-dns-resolvers/ > (01/14) Bleeping Computer

The US National Security Agency (NSA) says that companies should avoid using third party DNS resolvers to block threat actors' DNS traffic eavesdropping and manipulation attempts and to block access to internal network information. NSA's recommendation was made in a new advisory on the benefits (and risks) of using DNS over HTTPS (DoH) in enterprise environments, an encrypted domain name system (DNS) protocol that blocks unauthorized access to the DNS traffic between clients and DNS resolvers.

Telegram Bots at Heart of Classiscam Scam-as-a-Service < Caution-https://threatpost.com/telegram-bots-classiscam-scam/163061/ > (01/14) Threatpost

The cybercriminal service has scammed victims out of $6.5 million and continues to spread on Telegram. A new automated scam-as-a-service has been unearthed, which leverages Telegram bots in order to steal money and payment data from European victims. The scam, which researchers call Classiscam, is being sold as a service by Russian-speaking cybercriminals, and has been used by at least 40 separate cybergangs – which altogether made at least $6.5 million using the service in 2020.

NASCIO pushes feds for more cybersecurity help < Caution-https://gcn.com/articles/2021/01/14/nascio-advocacy-cyber.aspx > (01/14) GCN

For 2021, the National Association of State Chief Information Officers wants the federal government to address its long-standing cybersecurity concerns. Among its advocacy priorities, NASCIO is pushing for harmonized federal cybersecurity regulations, a dedicated cybersecurity grant program for state and local governments and widespread adoption of the .gov domain. For many years, states have complained that federal agencies' various security requirements for exchanging sensitive data places an undue burden on state governments as they struggle to comply with each agency's standards. In May 2020, the Government Accountability Office found that between 49% and 79% of federal agency cybersecurity requirements had conflicting parameters. NASCIO is urging Congress and agencies to streamline and coordinate their cybersecurity regulations to address duplicate regulations and inconsistent audit practices.

NSA warns against using DoH inside enterprise networks < Caution-https://www.zdnet.com/article/nsa-warns-against-using-doh-inside-enterprise-networks/ > (01/14) ZD Net

The US National Security Agency has published today a guide on the benefits and risks of encrypted DNS protocols, such as DNS-over-HTTPS (DoH), which have become widely used over the past two years. The US cybersecurity agency warns that while technologies like DoH can encrypt and hide user DNS queries from network observers, they also have downsides when used inside corporate networks. "DoH is not a panacea," the NSA said in a security advisory [PDF] published today, claiming that the use of the protocol gives companies a false sense of security, echoing many of the arguments presented in a ZDNet feature on DoH in October 2019.

Adjutant General Maj. Gen. Ben Corell said initially Iowa had planned to send 15 members of the 185th Refueling Wing to Washington but because of the attack on the Capitol last week, all states and territories have been asked to help.

National Mall will be closed on Inauguration Day due to security concerns < Caution-https://www.cnn.com/2021/01/14/politics/national-mall-closed-inauguration-day/index.html > (01/14) CNNThe National Mall will be closed to the general public on Inauguration Day due to security concerns, according to an official familiar with discussions. The official said there will be no big screens, no toilets, no panels were people stand, and that the public will not be able to get down to the mall where traditionally thousands gather to watch the new president be sworn in.

CYBERSECURITY'S NEW PRESIDENTIAL ADVOCATE: President-elect Joe Biden made clear Thursday that cybersecurity will be a major focus for his administration, proposing more than $10 billion in cyber and IT funding as part of his $1.9 trillion COVID-19 relief plan. If approved by Congress, the plan would give the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency and the General Services Administration $9 billion to invest in launching new IT and cybersecurity shared services, while also carving out funds for hiring technology experts and improving incident response.

5G SECURITY

ESPOO, Finland – Nokia today announced it has been selected as a technology provider and collaborator by the National Cybersecurity Center of Excellence (NCCoE) 5G Cybersecurity Project. Nokia will work with NCCoE and other key vendors, including members from government and industry to ensure the transition from 4G to 5G networks is secure. Nokia was selected by NCCoE to participate in the project due to its global success in 5G networks – including hardware and software, and mobile network security and 5G RAN expertise – to help refine a reference design and build use cases on standards-based solutions.

Mobile network providers in the UK are moving ahead with the deployment of 5G and have announced a range of new locations across the country that can now benefit from next-generation connectivity, even if few of us can get out and use it. Mobile operator O2 said that it has surpassed the target of reaching 150 locations across the country with 5G connectivity, with new networks opening, among other spots, in Bournemouth, Cheltenham, Doncaster and Southampton. O2 also announced that it has increased its 5G coverage footprint in larger cities including London, Birmingham, Glasgow, Bristol, Liverpool and Manchester.

RANSOMWARE

3 tips on how to approach crypto ransomware < Caution-https://www.securitymagazine.com/articles/94348-tips-on-how-to-approach-crypto-ransomware > (01/14) Security Magazine

The virtual working environments of many employees during the pandemic have exposed numerous companies' vulnerabilities to the threat of ransomware. As more and more companies operate remotely, the number of threat actors targeting these businesses will continue to rise. Unsecure systems and unsuspecting employees are vulnerable to ransomware attacks. In fact, during the first half of this year, ransomware attacks increased by nearly 900%. Overall, 2020 has been a cybersecurity pandemic all its own, with a 72% increase in ransomware growth due to COVID-19.

EMERGENCY COMMUNICATIONS

Emergency services continue to be a major force when it comes to coping with the COVID-19 health pandemic, and today a company that is building technology to help them run better is announcing a round of funding to continue expanding its business. Carbyne — an Israeli startup that has built a cloud-based platform aimed at emergency services to help them pinpoint more complete information about the people who are calling in, and to provide additional telemedicine services to start responding faster — has picked up $25 million.

Newsroom: Arlington Emergency Communications Center Leads Nation in Remote Call-Taking, Dispatching & Supervision < Caution-https://patch.com/virginia/arlington-va/newsroom-arlington-emergency-communications-center-leads-nation-remote-call > (01/14) Patch

On Wednesday, Jan. 13, the Arlington County Emergency Communications Center (ECC) became one of the first centers in the nation to implement capabilities that allow fire and emergency medical services (EMS) dispatchers and supervisors to deliver critical emergency communications services no matter where they are. Now, Arlington Fire-EMS dispatchers and supervisors are able work from a remote location, including from home. New capabilities in the 9-1-1 system allow for remote call-taking, dispatch, and supervision—breaking new ground in decentralizing and distributing public safety emergency communications.

Location(s): Central Islip, New York

In a press release on Thursday, the Department of Justice (DOJ) announced an indictment in Central Islip charging 14 high-ranking leaders from Mara Salvatrucha (MS-13) with terrorism offenses.

The defendants operated as MS-13's "board of directors," known as the Ranfla Nacional, who directed violence and criminal activity around the world for almost two decades.

Specifically, the indictment charges the defendants with conspiracy to provide and conceal material support to terrorists, conspiracy to commit acts of terrorism transcending national boundaries, conspiracy to finance terrorism, and narco-terrorism conspiracy in connection with the defendants' leadership of MS-13 from El Salvador, the United States, Mexico, and elsewhere.

A high-ranking DOJ official said, "The indictment announced today is the highest-reaching and most sweeping indictment targeting MS-13 and its command-and-control structure in U.S. history."

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Wednesday, January 13, 2021

Justice Department Publishes Statement on 2016 President's Council of Advisors on Science and Technology Report

Today, the Justice Department published a statement on the 2016 President's Council of Advisors on Science and Technology (PCAST) Report, Forensic Science in Criminal Courts: Ensuring Scientific Validity of Feature-Comparison Methods. The statement is a response to PCAST's claims regarding what it described as forensic "feature comparison methods."

Published in September 2016, the PCAST report has been cited by several courts that have recently limited the scope of opinion testimony by firearms and toolmarks examiners regarding the source of a bullet or shell casing. These courts relied on certain aspects of the PCAST Report to support their decisions. In its Report, PCAST claimed that forensic "feature comparison" methods belong to the scientific discipline of metrology (measurement science); that feature comparison methods can only be deemed "foundationally valid" by adhering to PCAST's mandatory and non-severable set of experimental design criteria; and that error rates for feature comparison methods can only be established using these "appropriately designed" black box studies.

The Department disagrees with these claims and explains why they are erroneous. Specifically, it is the Department's position that:

- Traditional forensic pattern examination methods—as currently practiced—do not belong to the scientific discipline of metrology. Forensic examiners visually compare the individual features observed in two examined samples, they do not measure The result of this comparison is a conclusion that is stated in words (nominal terms), not magnitudes (measurements).
- PCAST's claim that forensic pattern examination methods can only be validated using its non-severable set of nine experimental design criteria is inconsistent with its own examples, international laboratory standards, and authorities in experimental design. There is no single scientifically recognized means by which to validate a scientific method.
- Casework error rates cannot be established through the exclusive and non-severable application of PCAST's experimental design criteria. No single error rate is applicable to all labs, examiners, or cases.

MS-13's Highest-Ranking Leaders Charged with Terrorism Offenses in the United States

CENTRAL ISLIP, NY - Earlier today, an indictment was unsealed in Central Islip, New York charging 14 of the world's highest-ranking MS-13 leaders who are known today as the Ranfla Nacional, which operated as the Organization's Board of Directors, and directed MS-13's violence and criminal activity around the world for almost two decades.

Specifically, the indictment charges the defendants with conspiracy to provide and conceal material support to terrorists, conspiracy to commit acts of terrorism transcending national boundaries, conspiracy to finance terrorism and narco-terrorism conspiracy in connection with the defendants' leadership of the transnational criminal organization over the past two decades from El Salvador, the United States, Mexico and elsewhere.

Defendant Borromeo Enrique Henriquez, aka "Diablito de Hollywood," is widely recognized as the most powerful member of the Ranfla Nacional. Three of the indicted defendants, Fredy Ivan Jandres-Parada, aka "Lucky de Park View" and "Lacky de Park View," Cesar Humberto Lopez-Larios, aka "El Grenas de Stoners" and "Oso de Stoners," and Hugo Armando Quinteros-Mineros, aka "Flaco de Francis," remain at large and should be considered armed and dangerous. Members of the public with information concerning their whereabouts are strongly encouraged to contact the Federal Bureau of Investigation's (FBI) toll-free MS-13 tip line, 1-866-STP-MS13 (1-866-787-6713), or U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement's Homeland Security Investigations (HSI) at (866) 347-2423 or https://www.ice.gov/webform/ice-tip-form. Together, FBI and HSI have offered $20,000 in rewards for information leading to the arrest and conviction of each of the three fugitives. Henriquez and 10 other defendants are in custody in El Salvador. The United States will explore options for their extradition to the U.S. with the government of El Salvador.

Jeffrey A. Rosen, Acting Attorney General; Seth D. DuCharme, Acting U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of New York (EDNY); John J. Durham, Director of Joint Task Force Vulcan (JTFV); Christopher A. Wray, Director, FBI; and Derek Benner, Executive Associate Director, HSI, announced the unsealing of the indictment.

"The indictment announced today is the highest-reaching and most sweeping indictment targeting MS-13 and its command and control structure in U.S. history. When Attorney General Barr announced the creation of JTFV in August 2019, he envisioned a whole-of-government approach that would combine proven prosecution tools from the past with innovative strategies designed specifically to eliminate MS-13 leadership's ability to operate the gang and direct its terrorist activity. This indictment reflects an important step toward achieving that goal. By working side-by-side with our U.S. law enforcement partners and with our partners in El Salvador, we have charged MS-13's highest-ranking leaders with operating a transnational criminal organization that utilizes terror to impose their will on neighborhoods, businesses and innocent civilians across the United States and Central America," stated Acting Attorney General Rosen.

"MS-13 is responsible for a wave of death and violence that has terrorized communities, leaving neighborhoods on Long Island and throughout the Eastern District of New York awash in bloodshed," said Acting U.S. Attorney DuCharme. "Even when incarcerated, the Ranfla Nacional continued to direct MS-13's global operations, recruit new members, including children, into MS-13, and orchestrate murder and mayhem around the world. Today's ground-breaking indictment seeks to demolish MS-13 by targeting its command and control structure and holding MS-13's Board of Directors accountable for their terroristic actions."

"The FBI is committed to combatting all forms of terrorism that threaten the American people as well as our international partners," stated FBI Director Wray. "In collaboration with our federal, state, local and international partners, we took aggressive steps to target and pursue some of the highest levels of leadership of MS-13. This operation is a clear signal to others who engage in this type of transnational criminal activity: the FBI will work tirelessly to bring them to justice wherever they are based."

"For over a decade, HSI has remained steadfast in our resolve to dismantle transnational gangs like MS-13, stated HSI Executive Associate Director Benner. "As one of the most violent and dangerous criminal enterprises, MS-13 and La Ranfla Nacional were directly responsible for unthinkable violence and criminal activity in communities across the United States and throughout Central America. As a result of the hard work and substantial resources dedicated to Joint Task Force Vulcan by our domestic and international law enforcement partners, this indictment will have a lasting disruptive effect on the future global illicit activities of this transnational criminal organization."

As alleged in the indictment, the Ranfla Nacional comprises the highest level of leadership of MS-13. In approximately 2002, the defendants and other MS-13 leaders began establishing a highly-organized, hierarchical command and control structure as a means to effectuate their decisions and enforce their orders, even while in prison. They directed acts of violence and murder in El Salvador, the United States, and elsewhere, established military-style training camps for its members and obtained military weapons such as rifles, handguns, grenades, improvised explosive devices (IED) and rocket launchers. As leaders of MS-13, the defendants controlled swaths of territory and engaged in public relations efforts on behalf of the transnational criminal organization. Further, the defendants used MS-13's large membership in the United States to engage in criminal activities, such as drug trafficking and extortion to raise money to support MS-13's terrorist activities in El Salvador and elsewhere, and directed members in the United States to commit acts of violence, including murders, to further its goals.

As further alleged in the indictment, a central theme of the rules implemented by the Ranfla Nacional was the requirement of loyalty to MS-13, or to the "barrio." The requirement for loyalty was central to all aspects of life for MS-13 members. Members who disobeyed the rules, showed disloyalty to the gang or to its leaders, cooperated with law enforcement, or disrespected other members were subject to severe punishment, including death. The rules put in place by the Ranfla Nacional allowed the gang to flourish in parts of the United States, including within the EDNY where, under the defendants' command, MS-13 has committed numerous acts of violence—including murders, attempted murders, assaults, kidnappings, drug trafficking, extortion of individuals and businesses, obstructed justice and sent dues and the proceeds of criminal activity by wire transfer to MS-13 leaders in El Salvador.

As further outlined in the indictment, the Ranfla Nacional has exercised its power over the Government of El Salvador by committing acts of violence and intimidation over government officials, law enforcement and the population of El Salvador at large. In doing so the Ranfla Nacional has ordered the killing of law enforcement and government officials in El Salvador as well as ordering a "green light," or killing, of a FBI Special Agent detailed to El Salvador investigating MS-13 and its members. Moreover, by controlling the level of MS-13's violence, the Ranfla Nacional exercised leverage with the Government of El Salvador. For example, as alleged in the indictment, from approximately 2012 until approximately 2015, the Ranfla Nacional entered into a "truce" with the then-Government of El Salvador. As part of this agreement, the Ranfla Nacional directed MS-13 to reduce homicides in El Salvador in exchange for improved prison conditions, benefits and cash payments. In 2015, when this agreement collapsed, the Ranfla Nacional blamed the United States, believing that the U.S. government pressured the government of El Salvador to end the "truce" as a condition of receiving funds from the United States. Thereafter, in early 2016, the Ranfla Nacional began planning for a major campaign of coordinated violence in El Salvador in retaliation for the harsher measures imposed on its members after the end of the "truce." As alleged in the indictment, the defendants ordered all cliques in El Salvador to create a specialized unit of MS-13 members to target police officers, military members, and government officials in El Salvador. These members underwent military training at MS-13 military training camps in El Salvador. The defendants also ordered all cliques, including those in the United States and in the EDNY, to provide profits from their MS-13-related criminal activity to be used to purchase weapons for the planned attacks on police in El Salvador. In total, the defendants collected over $600,000 U.S. dollars for this fund which was used to purchase weapons, including M-16s and M-60 machine guns, grenades, IEDs, and rocket launchers. Furthermore, the defendants ordered increased violence, including murders, in the EDNY and other parts of the United States, which saw a dramatic increase in MS-13 violence in 2016 and 2017.

Finally, as alleged in the indictment, the Ranfla Nacional directed the expansion of MS-13 activities around the world, most significantly into Mexico, where several high-ranking leaders were sent to organize operations there. In Mexico, MS-13 leaders made connections to obtain narcotics and firearms, conducted business with Mexican drug cartels such as the Zetas, Gulf Cartel, Cártel de Jalisco Nueva Generación (CJNG) and Sinaloa Cartel, and engaged in human trafficking and smuggling.

In August 2019, Attorney General William P. Barr created JTFV to carry out the recommendations of the MS-13 Subcommittee formed under the Attorney General's Transnational Organized Crime Task Force (TOC Task Force). The Attorney General's TOC Task Force resulted from President Donald J. Trump's February 2017 Executive Order directing the Departments of Justice, State, and Homeland Security, and the Office of the Director of National Intelligence to coordinate a whole-of-government approach to dismantle transnational criminal organizations, such as MS-13, and increase the safety of the American people.

Since its creation, JTFV has successfully implemented a whole-of-government approach to combatting MS-13, including increasing coordination and collaboration with foreign law enforcement partners, including El Salvador, Mexico, Honduras and Guatemala; designating priority MS-13 programs, cliques and leaders, who have the most impact on the United States, for targeted prosecutions; and coordinating significant MS-13 indictments in U.S. Attorney's Offices across the country, including the first use of national security charges against MS-13 leaders.

JTFV has been comprised of members from the Department of Justice's National Security Division and the Criminal Division, as well as U.S. Attorney's Offices across the country, including the EDNY; the District of New Jersey; the Northern District of Ohio; the District of Utah; the Eastern District of Virginia; the District of Massachusetts; the Eastern District of Texas; the Southern District of New York; the District of Alaska; the Southern District of Florida; the Southern District of California; the District of Nevada; and the District of Columbia. In addition, all Department of Justice law enforcement agencies are involved in the effort, including the FBI; the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration; the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives; the U.S. Marshals Service; and the U.S. Bureau of Prisons. In addition, HSI also plays a critical role in JTFV.

Acting Attorney General Rosen expressed his sincere thanks to Attorney General Raul Melara of El Salvador for the assistance of his office, as well as investigators from El Salvador's Policía Nacional Civil, Centro Antipandilla Transnacional unit for their invaluable cooperation. Additionally, numerous Department of Justice components contributed to this indictment, including: the National Security Division's Counterterrorism Section; the Justice Department's Office of International Affairs; the Criminal Division's Office of Overseas Prosecutorial Development, Assistance and Training; and Organized Crime and Gang Section; and the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Forces Executive Office. Finally, consistent with President Trump's Executive Order and the Attorney General's whole of government approach, the Department of State has provided critical support for JTFV's mission.

The charges announced today are allegations, and the defendants are presumed innocent unless and until proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt in a court of law. If convicted, the defendants face a maximum sentence of life in prison.

The government's case is being prosecuted by Assistant U.S. Attorneys James Donnelly, Matthew Shepherd and Stewart Young from JTFV, and Assistant U.S. Attorneys Paul G. Scotti, Justina L. Geraci and Megan E. Farrell from the EDNY's Long Island Criminal Division.

About the US Crisis Monitor

The US Crisis Monitor supports data-driven initiatives to build community resilience and facilitate efforts to track, prevent, and mitigate political violence in America. A joint project of the Armed Conflict Location & Event Data Project (ACLED) and the Bridging Divides Initiative (BDI) at Princeton University, the US Crisis Monitor provides the public with real-time data and analysis on political violence and demonstrations around the country, establishing an evidence base from which to identify risks, hotspots, and available resources to empower local communities in times of crisis.

Introduction

More than 150 million Americans cast ballots in the 2020 presidential election, setting a new record even as the COVID-19 crisis intensified (CNBC, 4 November 2020). Despite the heightened risk of political violence going into the vote (NPR, 22 October 2020), government officials, civil society organizations, and local communities organized to address the threat, with limited interference on Election Day and a peaceful resolution by the end of the week, as former Vice President Joe Biden was projected by national media to be the victor (VOA, 7 November 2020).

The results were immediately disputed. Tensions increased as it became apparent that a decisive outcome would be delayed beyond Election Day due to logistical challenges posed by the pandemic. Current President Donald Trump declared without evidence that the election was being "stolen," prompting a surge in protests outside vote-counting centers as well as threats against election officials (PBS, 17 November 2020). On the right, tensions persist amid a combined legal and disinformation campaign to discredit the process and to overturn Biden's victory. According to a late November poll from the Economist and YouGov, almost 90% of Trump voters believe the election result is illegitimate (Economist, 21 November 2020), a finding echoed by a range of concurrent surveys (Newsweek, 10 November 2020; Politico, 9 November 2020). And just 27 of 249 Republicans in Congress — or 10% have acknowledged Biden's win as of early December (Washington Post, 5 December 2020). As the president refuses to concede, hundreds of 'Stop the Steal' protests have been organized across the country, in which militias² and armed actors have taken an enlarged role. Members of right-wing armed groups like the Oath Keepers have announced that they will never recognize a Biden presidency, and are committed to resisting the administration's policies (Independent, 15 November 2020).

While the legal pathways to a second term have all but entirely closed for President Trump, with recounts confirming Biden's win and court cases producing no evidence of mass voter fraud, he has not formally conceded. Although the Trump administration has allowed the Biden team to begin the transition process, the president continues to hold rallies against the so-called "rigged election" and has called on Republican legislators in states like Georgia to appoint pro-Trump electors to the Electoral College (ABC News, 7 December 2020). Under these murky circumstances, where Trump supporters believe they have either lost the election or are at high risk of seeing the election stolen, right-wing mobilization is likely to spike relative to a clear electoral defeat and concession.

Building on the assumption that backers of a losing candidate are more likely to mobilize during the post-election period — particularly when a subset of the losing candidate's support base is organized, armed, and has a demonstrated capacity for violence — this report analyzes the potential for persistent

 $^{^1}$ Compared to 23% of Hillary Clinton's supporters in 2016, and 36% of Al Gore's supporters in 2000.

² Around the world, ACLED defines militias, which are a large and diverse range of actors, as armed and organized violent groups that are extra-legal — meaning they are, by definition, extra-military, extra-state, non-institutional entities. While some of these groups may be pro-government, they need not be. Those which are pro-government often only have indirect links to the state, yet may mobilize and operate with the assistance of important allies, including factions within the state. "[Pro-government militias] are made possible by a political culture that allows for unaccountable agents and actions. They present a serious threat because of the support they receive from state elites allowing them to perpetrate violence on behalf of those elites with impunity" (Raleigh & Kishi, 2018). ACLED chooses to use the same terminology — the word 'militia' — for all regions of global coverage, particularly to underline the consistencies in the activities and incentives of such actors across geographic regions. For more on ACLED definitions, see the ACLED Codebook.

right-wing unrest through the inauguration and beyond. Reviewing new ACLED data³ covering the past seven months of political violence and demonstration activity, the report tracks key shifts in unrest from the start of the summer to the election and its aftermath. The risk of political violence in the coming weeks will be influenced by the type and degree of organized right-wing opposition to the incoming administration, as well as the efficacy of peacebuilding and violence mitigation efforts aimed at reducing polarization, fighting disinformation, and bridging partisan divides. ACLED analysis identifies four main trajectories through which right-wing mobilization could lead to violence in the post-election period (see table):

- 1. If right-wing demonstrations are limited largely to militia groups, especially national movements, then the risk of large-scale violence increases, namely events with multiple active shooters. This scenario is more likely in locations where mobilization is linked to local militia groups with histories of high levels of activity.
- 2. If demonstrations primarily involve the mass mobilization of decentralized, armed individuals, then the risk of small-scale, individualized violence will increase. This is a more likely scenario in locations experiencing left-wing protests or where new gun regulations are under consideration by local or state governments.
- 3. If demonstrations are frequently targeted by violent sole perpetrators, as seen in a rise in concurrent or post-protest car rammings, aggressive individual attackers, or 'leaderless resistance' modalities, then the risk of widespread individualized violence will increase. This is a more likely scenario in sites of sustained political uprisings or enduring local tension such as areas where well-organized Black Lives Matter or leftist activism has persisted beyond the summer and into the fall.
- 4. If demonstrations are predominantly driven by unarmed mass mobilization of broadly unaffiliated, and heterogenous right-wing protesters, then the risk of lethal violence will decrease, while the risk of street-fighting, especially brawls with counter-protesters, will increase. This scenario is unlikely to manifest for sustained periods of time, but is more likely to take hold in areas where local and national actors perceive high levels of election fraud.

Potential trajectories for right-wing mobilization and violence in the post-election period

Trajectory	Likelihood (Short-term)	Likelihood (Medium-term)	Potential for Violence	Locations at Highest Risk
(1) Militia groups	Low	Moderate	Low to Moderate	Locations where mobilization is linked to local militia groups with histories of high levels of activity (e.g. Lansing, Michigan)
(2) Decentralized armed individuals	Moderate	Low	Moderate	Locations experiencing left-wing protests or where gun restrictions are under consideration by local or state governments (e.g. Richmond, Virginia)
(3) Violent sole perpetrators	High	High	High	Areas that have sustained uprising activity or enduring local political tension (e.g. Portland, Oregon)
(4) Unarmed mass mobilization	Very High	Very High	Low	Areas where election fraud is perceived by local and national actors (e.g. Atlanta, Georgia)

Shifting Trends: Pre- and Post-Election

Dominant Protest Movements

Demonstrations surged over the summer ahead of the general election, particularly in the immediate aftermath of George Floyd's killing by police in Minneapolis. Floyd's death at the end of May sparked a new phase of protests associated with Black Lives Matter (BLM), a movement challenging police violence and structural racism in America, which led to thousands of demonstrations around the country. While media coverage has focused on cases of looting and vandalism, fueling right-wing disinformation campaigns aimed at mischaracterizing BLM activists as "violent extremists" (ADL, 2020), the vast majority of demonstrations associated with the movement have remained peaceful. Although ACLED data indicate that 94% of these demonstrations have involved no violent or destructive activity as of late November, a contemporaneous Civiqs poll measuring support for BLM found that 38% of total respondents — and 47% of white respondents — were opposed to the movement, even as support has remained high among Black and Hispanic communities (Civiqs, 29 November 2020). A similar poll in mid-September found that just 16% of White Republicans expressed support for the movement (Pew Research Center, 16 September 2020).

Against this backdrop, demonstrations associated with the BLM movement have been disproportionately met with government intervention compared to other types of protests. When authorities have engaged BLM-linked demonstrations, they have also disproportionately used force to disperse the demonstrators (for more information, see ACLED's report on demonstrations and political violence trends throughout summer 2020). Thousands have been arrested in what activists have decried as a "deliberate crackdown" (Al Jazeera, 16 November 2020), with reports that those detained have faced excessive charges threatening long prison terms, a "suppression tactic" used to discourage mobilization (The Guardian, 16 August 2020).

Under pressure from the heavy-handed state reaction, the number of demonstration events associated with the BLM movement has declined in the weeks and months following Floyd's death. Such a response — particularly the use of force against demonstrators, harsh consequences for those arrested, and intimidation by armed extra-legal actors like militia groups — can alter the incentives of participants in mass movements like BLM. Due to factors like protest fatigue, social movements are rarely able to sustain high levels of mass mobilization over time. In light of these trends, the diminished levels of BLM-linked demonstration activity since the initial spike in May is not surprising (see navy line in graph below). Nevertheless, demonstrations associated with the BLM movement continue, and have taken on a very local focus in recent weeks — such as multi-day protests in Omaha, Nebraska in response to the death of

⁴ This activity includes violently disruptive and/or destructive acts targeting other individuals, property, businesses, other rioting groups, or armed actors. Such demonstrations can involve engagement in violence (e.g. clashes with police), vandalism (e.g. property destruction), looting, road-blocking using barricades, or burning materials like tires, among other activities. It is important to note that this category includes events where violence may have been initially instigated by the demonstrators as well as events where violence may have been initially instigated by police or other actors engaging the demonstrators. Kenneth Jones;⁵ demonstrations in Albuquerque, New Mexico calling for a thorough investigation into the case of Rodney Applewhite;⁶ and protests in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma calling for justice in the case of Stavian Rodriguez.⁷

For the purpose of this analysis, right-wing demonstrations encompass a range of distinct but interrelated movements, including: pro-Trump or anti-Biden rallies, as well as events that involve or express support for the Republican Party; pro-police demonstrations, such as those that involve supporters of the 'Back the Blue' or 'Blue Lives Matter' movements, which often organize as counter-protests against demonstrations associated with the BLM movement; demonstrations that involve QAnon conspiracy theory supporters or protesters associated with the 'Save Our Children' movement; protests that involve members of right-wing militias or street movements⁸ either actively participating or standing by to 'keep the peace' during an event; and 'Stop the Steal' demonstrations, which have specifically emerged in the post-election period.

In contrast, demonstrations associated with the left-wing include protests that are anti-Trump or pro-Biden, as well as those involving or supporting the Democratic Party; those associated with the BLM movement advocating for an end to police violence and structural racism; those associated with Antifa; those involving left-leaning groups such as Abolish ICE, the NAACP, or the Democratic Socialists of America; and 'Count Every Vote' demonstrations, which have specifically emerged during the election period. Unlike demonstrations associated with the right-wing, which authorities attempt to disperse under 4% of the time, demonstrations associated with the left-wing are met with government intervention over 9% of the time. When authorities engage demonstrations associated with the right-wing, they use force nearly one-third or 34% of the time. Meanwhile, authorities use force in demonstrations associated with the left-wing over half or 51% of the time.

⁷ Stavian Rodriguez was a 15-year-old Latino teen killed by police after a failed armed robbery. Video of the incident appears to show Rodriguez with his hands up and his weapon on the ground when several shots were fired at him (KOCO, 25 November 2020).

Street movements are defined as a social movement predominantly taking to the street or public square to demonstrate or make their views known. These movements can range from peaceful and those favoring social justice, to violent and racist. The common factor is that presence on the street at crucial gatherings marks a primary form of political programming and activity (though is not always the sole modality for engagement). Contemporary right-wing street movements in the United States usually privilege street fighting and attacks on dissent as their usual organizing, though some do not engage in this type of response.

Meanwhile, right-wing demonstrations (see inset box for definition) have followed a different pattern, both in levels of activity and state response. Right-wing mobilization increased in the lead-up to the election and surpassed the number of BLM-linked demonstrations (see brown line in graph below). Yet right-wing demonstration activity has met with very limited government intervention, underscoring how these events consistently face low levels of force, rare arrests, minimal legal consequences, and infrequent intimidation by armed extra-legal entities, particularly when compared with their left-wing and BLM counterparts. Armed and violent contingents like the Proud Boys, who previously responded to President Trump's order to "stand back, stand by" (Associated Press, 30 September 2020), have declared that the standby order has been "rescinded" in the post-election period (Forbes, 7 November 2020). Street-fighting has broken out at multiple demonstrations involving Proud Boys around the country since the election, including in North Carolina, New York, California, and Washington, DC (Daily Kos, 3 December 2020).

On 3 December, Grand Master Jay, the leader of the Not Fucking Around Coalition (NFAC), was arrested on federal charges for allegedly pointing a gun at officers stationed on a roof in downtown Louisville during his group's gathering on 4 September (Associated Press, 3 December 2020). While the NFAC is an armed, organized, extra-legal group, it is distinct from most other militias in the US context in that it is a burgeoning Black separatist movement that, in many ways, is a direct reaction to many right-wing groups. The arrest of Jay is a rare example of an alleged 'militia' member being arrested for activities that took place at a demonstration in which they participated. Other arrests of predominantly white militia groups, like that of the Wolverine Watchmen, arrested for the plotted kidnapping of Michigan Governor Gretchen Whitmer (Associated Press, 8 October 2020), are often tied to either actuated violence or an alleged unity of purpose towards committing violence in the future. Even the armed Black movement known as BLM757 based out of Richmond, Virginia shared in a press conference in Newport News, Virginia that they were only allowed to speak without intervention outside of a police precinct because of Boogaloo Boi Mike Dunn's militia on the scene (News2Share, 15 October 2020). Relatedly, in the same state, a mostly white gathering of 2nd Amendment activists and militia groups gathered in Richmond at the beginning of the year for a Lobby Day event organized by the far-right Virginia Citizens Defense League (VCDL) and actively broke local gun ordinances while police looked on (Reuters, 20 January 2020; MilitiaWatch, 16 April 2020). The VCDL is already planning a similar engagement in 2021, for which militia and other right-wing activists are likely to show up, this time for a car rally (Virginia Star, 30 November 2020).

Demonstrations associated with the right-wing have been met with law enforcement intervention far less frequently relative to BLM-linked demonstrations: under 4% of events, compared to nearly 10% of events. When authorities have engaged demonstrations associated with BLM, they have used force — such as firing less-lethal weapons like tear gas, rubber bullets, and pepper spray or beating demonstrators with batons — more than 51% of the time, compared to only 34% for right-wing demonstrations (see graph below).¹⁰

¹⁰ As noted above, nearly 94% of demonstrations associated with the BLM movement involved no violent or destructive activity as of late November, meaning that such activity was reported in 6% of demonstrations. It is important to note that this 6% includes both those demonstrations in which demonstrators may have engaged in such activity, and were then met with use of force by authorities, as well as cases in which law enforcement used force against peaceful protesters who only responded violently as a result of police engagement. Provocative activity by law enforcement — such as showing up to peaceful events with riot gear, or using tactics like kettling in which protesters are cornered — has been common. ACLED does not systematically code these dynamics, including who initiated violence, given the limitations and biases in reporting on these factors (though available information is included in the 'Notes' section in ACLED data). Notably, even if all demonstrations in which BLM-associated demonstrators reportedly engaged in looting, vandalism, or violence are excluded from analysis — if the assumption were to be that the use of force by authorities under such circumstances is 'warranted' — nearly 5% of all peaceful BLM-linked protests were met with law enforcement intervention, and only 18% of these events saw the use of force by authorities. In comparison, less than 3% of peaceful right-wing protests were met with law enforcement intervention, and only 18% of these events saw the use of force by authorities. These trends suggest that government intervention and use of force are not merely set responses to demonstrator behavior, but rather part of a broader attitude, policy, or strategic approach to different types of mobilization in different local, state, and national contexts.

Armed Group Activity

Militias and street movements have become increasingly active in right-wing demonstrations this year. Over the summer, right-wing militias primarily mobilized in response to the BLM movement and pandemic-related public health restrictions. In the run-up to the election, militias additionally organized around perceived threats to the sanctity of the election such as mass voter fraud, with groups like the Oath Keepers warning that they would arrive at polling stations and use violence if necessary to "protect" the vote from being "stolen" (Media Matters, 28 October 2020; NPR, 31 October 2020). A proactive approach by civil society groups and government officials aimed at preventing the threat of armed intimidation at the polls — including an "extremism crackdown" by federal law enforcement in Michigan (Detroit News, 29 October 2020) and the arrest of a Proud Boys member who threatened to blow up a polling location in North Dakota (Daily Beast, 30 October 2020) — may have reduced the risk of violence and resulted in limited militia activity on Election Day (USA Today, 3 November 2020).

Compounding the effects of increased attention and preventative measures aimed at mitigating the risk of militia activity at the polls, the strategic incentive for these groups to ramp up operations on Election Day itself decreased as the vote approached, particularly compared to the pre- and post-election periods. This is in part due to their overriding focus on perceived attacks against the sanctity of the election, such as 'deviations' like mass mail-in voting during the pandemic. Large-scale violence against polling centers on Election Day would undermine that sanctity and challenge the right-wing narrative that in-person voting was more valid than mail-in voting — a narrative pushed by the Trump administration, which actively discouraged voting by mail based on debunked allegations that the process is exceptionally vulnerable to fraud (Washington Post, 11 September 2020). Trends suggest that those voting in person on Election Day were disproportionately Republican supporters, with Democrats being more likely to have taken advantage of mail-in or early voting (FiveThirtyEight, 28 August 2020; The Hill, 15 September 2020), diminishing the incentive for militia groups to target polling centers filled with 'legitimate' right-wing voters on Election Day.

ACLED analysis of militia activity during elections around the world finds that these incentives change over the course of the electoral period: before the vote, armed groups have an incentive to intimidate and suppress voters, while afterward this incentive shifts to challenging election results and ballot counting. Joint research conducted by ACLED and MilitiaWatch prior to the US election outlined multiple factors that raise the risk of militia activity before, during, and after the vote, including perceptions of leftist coup activities — i.e. 'stealing' an election — as well as highly competitive votes in swing states — i.e. states where vote counting appears to be very close or delayed (for more, see the ACLED and MilitiaWatch joint report). Many of these drivers emerged on or after Election Day, contributing to the rise in right-wing protest activity in the aftermath of the vote and the increased role for militia groups within these demonstrations.

Late on the night of the election, when the preliminary results began to indicate that President-elect Biden was likely to win, President Trump sent out a tweet claiming that the vote was being "stolen," without presenting evidence (Vox, 4 November 2020). In response, a 'Stop the Steal' demonstration campaign quickly took form, with participants demanding the rejection of votes perceived to be illegitimate, such as predominantly Democratic mail-in ballots (see map below). These demonstrations, encouraged by the executive branch and many right-wing media outlets, rapidly spread across the country, often met with counter-protesters calling on officials to 'Count Every Vote.' Militias and armed individuals have been disproportionately active in 'Stop the Steal' demonstrations compared to other demonstrations.

'Stop the Steal' Demonstrations (4 - 28 November 2020)

As the movement escalated in the immediate aftermath of Election Day, the total percentage of demonstrations involving militias — both those in which they actively participated, as well as those they attended to 'keep the peace' — has also risen dramatically (see graph below). The increased rate of armed, organized, and mobilized militia members active at demonstrations around the country amplifies the latent threat of violence.

¹¹ Many 'Count Every Vote' rallies were pre-planned ahead of election week in anticipation of a long vote-counting period, while others emerged as counter-protests to 'Stop the Steal' demonstrations.

While demonstrations involving militias peaked in June in terms of gross numbers and then declined, they have since surged to roughly the same level in November. Right-wing mobilization is often posited as 'reactive,' in that it occurs in response to mobilization by the left. In June, the increase in involvement by right-wing militias in demonstrations can be seen as a reaction to the mass mobilization of the BLM movement (i.e. 'leftist organizing') — demonstrations associated with the BLM movement were at their height in the weeks following Floyd's killing at the end of May. Meanwhile, in November, the spike in right-wing militia involvement in demonstrations can be seen as a reaction to perceived 'leftist coup behavior' in the form of an attempt to 'steal the election.'

Unsurprisingly, 'Stop the Steal' demonstrations have been disproportionately competitive compared to other types of demonstrations, meaning that a high number of counter-protests, such as 'Count Every Vote' rallies, have also been present. Nearly one-third — or 32% — of 'Stop the Steal' demonstrations have involved counter-protests. 12 This contrasts with only 9% of all 'Count Every Vote' demonstrations, less than 6% of demonstrations associated with the BLM movement, and just over 5% of demonstrations at large.

¹² If two protests occur at the same time, in the same place, and they are essentially 'counter' to one another, then the events are coded as a single event instead of as two separate events. While ACLED will code the two parties, ACLED does not code which side may have shown up first, or who is countering whom. Such information is limited and often biased in reporting. To the extent such information is noted in sources, it will be noted in the 'Notes' section of the data for users. Discussion of 'counter-protests' here refers to cases in which 'Stop the Steal' demonstrators showed up to protest and 'counter' another group as well as cases in which 'Stop the Steal' demonstrators were protesting and others showed up to 'counter' them. It is a measure of how 'competitive' such demonstrators can be, especially relative to demonstrations around other issues. Sometimes, other parties, such as police, may get involved in counter-protests — on behalf of one side or the other, or to 'keep the peace.' In such cases, police may be coded as one of the primary actors; ACLED defaults to coding the more important engagement in each event. Nevertheless, all events that capture a counter-demonstration include a 'tag' in the 'Notes', stylized as "[counter-protest]", which can be used to identify all counter-demonstrations. For answers to frequently asked questions about ACLED coding methodology in the US context, see these FAQs.

Potential Trajectories

The current trends in political violence and demonstration activity in post-election America are not a direct continuation of the trends identified over the summer: there has been a significant shift in the leading protest actors, the involvement of armed groups and individuals, and how they are in turn met by the authorities. Likewise, ACLED data do not indicate that these current trends will remain static through to the inauguration and initial stages of the next administration. The risk of political violence and unrest in the coming weeks will be influenced by the type and degree of organized right-wing opposition to the incoming administration, as well as the efficacy of peacebuilding and violence mitigation efforts aimed at reducing polarization, fighting disinformation, and bridging partisan divides. ACLED analysis identifies four main trajectories through which right-wing mobilization could lead to violence in the post-election period:

- 1. If right-wing demonstrations are limited largely to militia groups, especially national movements, then the risk of large-scale violence increases, namely events with multiple active shooters. This scenario is more likely in locations where mobilization is linked to local militia groups with histories of high levels of activity.
- 2. If demonstrations primarily involve the mass mobilization of decentralized, armed individuals, then the risk of small-scale, individualized violence will increase. This is a more likely scenario in locations experiencing left-wing protests or where new gun regulations are under consideration by local or state governments.
- 3. If demonstrations are frequently targeted by violent sole perpetrators, as seen in a rise in concurrent or post-protest car rammings, aggressive individual attackers, or 'leaderless resistance' modalities, then the risk of widespread individualized violence will increase. This is a more likely scenario in sites of sustained political uprisings or enduring local tension such as areas where well-organized Black Lives Matter or leftist activism has persisted beyond the summer and into the fall.
- 4. If demonstrations are predominantly driven by unarmed mass mobilization of broadly unaffiliated, and heterogenous right-wing protesters, then the risk of lethal violence will decrease, while the risk of street-fighting, especially brawls with counter-protesters, will increase. This scenario is unlikely to manifest for sustained periods of time, but is more likely to take hold in areas where local and national actors perceive high levels of election fraud.

(1) Demonstrations limited largely to militia groups

If right-wing demonstrations are limited largely to militia groups, then there will be a higher risk of mass violence. This is especially the case if national movements become increasingly involved in demonstration activity. National groups, especially relative to local, non-affiliated movements, tend to be more extreme ideologically among their members. With 'Stop the Steal' demonstrations, there has already been disproportionate engagement by militia groups relative to other protests: militia groups have participated in 18% of all 'Stop the Steal' demonstrations, while they have engaged in less than 1% of all other demonstrations (see graph below). For example, the day after the election, in Phoenix, Arizona, a member of AZ Patriots entered the Maricopa County Recorder's Office by impersonating a member of the press, live-streaming an allegation that the county had used a sharpie to invalidate ballots before being removed from the building. Following this allegation, more than 200 people — including members of AZ Patriots and III%ers, among others — rallied outside the ballot-counting facility in support of President Trump, alleging that some ballots had been improperly counted (Washington Post, 5 November 2020). The following day, Proud Boys were reportedly present at a 'Stop the Steal' protest in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania (WHYY-FM, 5 November 2020); Twitter, 5 November 2020).

Recent militia-driven mobilizations have set their sights on state government leaders. In Atlanta, the III% Security Force militia has been highly involved in 'Stop the Steal' gatherings but has also organized multiple November weekend 'MAGA Drag' caravans outside the homes of Republican officials as well (Vanity Fair, 7 December 2020). In Michigan, local armed groups gathered outside the home of Michigan Secretary of State Jocelyn Benson's home on the night of 5 December, which Benson described as an act "done with the primary purpose of intimidation of public officials" (Metro Times, 7 December 2020).

¹⁴ While the trend is already clear, it is surely an undercount: many militia groups are organizing and attending these demonstrations outside of the mantle of their 'public militia affiliation' and instead as more quotidien unarmed protesters. This is likely due to a mix of reasons, from the additional organizational energy required to show up as a militia group, individual interests to show up at a protest not solely as an armed supporter, and the perceived urgency to join street or caravan movements. One other reason for this is the existence of 'gun-free' zones or areas that do not allow open carry — areas that without major organizing usually dissuade people from showing up armed to protest.

In addition to engagement in demonstrations, the number of recruitment and training events involving militias also remains higher than average relative to the last seven months. As some militia groups have involved themselves directly in the 'Stop the Steal' movement — such as the III' Security Force and the Oath Keepers — this concurrent rise in recruitment and training is to be expected given its strategic advantage.

Current trends indicate that when militias are involved in right-wing demonstrations, the demonstrations tend to turn violent or destructive more frequently — 12% of the time — relative to other right-wing demonstrations in which militias are not directly involved — less than 3% of the time (see graph below). In this sense, the presence of a militia at a demonstration increases the risk of violent or destructive activity even before the event begins.

Members of militia groups have become more primed for acting in the streets and explicitly on behalf of a political party, further reinvigorating an American far-right that has already been engaging in more aggressive speech and organizing online since the start of the summer. The election has been an important signpost and driver for militias, and it likely speaks to the internal turmoil of many groups that there has not been greater street organizing given their online communications around and after the election. Many within the militia milieu are highly suspicious and competitive of one another, for example, and groups are often prone to splinters, reformations, and internal coups over lines of communication and membership (MilitiaWatch, 15 June 2019; MilitiaWatch, 11 September 2020). Coalition-building has been a major difficulty for many on the far-right in recent years, especially after the fallout of the right-wing killing of antifascist activist Heather Heyer at the Unite the Right rally in Charlottesville, Virginia in 2017 (NBC News, 7 December 2018).

There are signs that this pattern could change. 'Stop the Steal' demonstrations, and election-related demonstrations more largely, are attracting multiple militia groups, with participants either organizing in tandem or organically responding to the same event as a mobilizing factor. New coalitions are likely already being built during these rallies — which have put online fascists and militia leaders in the same organizing space once more (see section below on Unarmed Mass Mobilization). Online communications on and around local and national elections for many of these communities have been rife with call-to-action posts and discussion of the need to 'get organized,' and their adherents are highly electrified at the possibility of a 'leftist coup' (see section below on Mass Mobilization of Decentralized, Armed Individuals).

(2) Mass mobilization of decentralized, armed individuals

If demonstrations involve the mass mobilization of decentralized, yet armed, individuals, then there will be a higher risk of small-scale, individualized violence. This is especially the case if mobilization increasingly takes the form of 'muster calls' or armed 'calls to action.' Cases where armed and primed individuals have responded to networked calls to action have resulted in multiple shooting incidents targeting opposing demonstrators in recent months. Examples include Kyle Rittenhouse's response to a muster call by the Kenosha Guard in Wisconsin in late August (New York Times, 16 October 2020), or Steven Ray Baca's response to a muster call by the New Mexico Civil Guard in Albuquerque, New Mexico in June (The Guardian, 17 June 2020). While such violence has so far been small in scale and scope, it has proven lethal.

While this type of lethal violence has yet to become a feature of the post-election period, the risk of escalation is significant. Since the election, armed individuals have demonstrated the willingness to respond to calls to 'stop the steal'. For example, two armed QAnon supporters were arrested outside a vote-counting center in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania for carrying handguns without a license after driving there from Virginia two days after the election. Some reports indicate that they intended to deliver fraudulent ballots to the center (CNN, 7 November 2020). Their traveling from a distance to 'support the cause' highlights the draw of broad calls to action.

The following day in Detroit, Michigan, police investigated a bomb threat outside of a voting center where absentee ballots were being counted amidst rival pro-Trump and pro-Biden demonstrations (FOX2 Detroit, 6 November 2020). A similar incident was also reported in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania on 6 November (The Independent, 6 November 2020), as well as death threats targeting election officials with reminders that "this is what the Second Amendment is for" (Philly Voice, 9 November 2020). Such incidents underline how calls to action can inspire those not formally affiliated with organized groups.

¹⁵ Violent threats against poll workers and election officials have continued well past the vote in key swing states. According to a PBS investigation in mid-November: "The exact number of incidents of poll-worker intimidation is unknown. But a FRONTLINE review, based on questions to a dozen election and law enforcement agencies in five swing states, as well as local media reports, found examples of threats or acute security risks to election workers in Pennsylvania, Nevada, Michigan, Arizona and Georgia" (PBS, 17 November 2020).

Similarly, in mid-November, a number of people, including some armed with assault rifles and handguns, gathered in Johnson Square in Savannah, Georgia for a 'Stop the Steal' event (Savannah Now, 21 November 2020). Despite no reports suggesting these individuals were part of an organized militia, local or otherwise, the call to 'stop the steal' still served to inspire them to take up arms and 'join the fight.'

In the past, this type of mobilization has typically occurred around 'Second Amendment Rallies,' wherein supporters are asked to show up armed to a demonstration, often on the steps of a capitol building or in direct response to policy, proposed or otherwise. For example, this year, a series of pro-Second Amendment, pro-militia, and anti-lockdown protests have been reported in and around Lansing, Michigan. These began in the early days of the coronavirus pandemic, in response to public health restrictions, and have continued through the election period. These types of mobilizations provide an important on-ramp for recently radicalized individuals, or those who have become prone to commit violence without the social accountability of a more organized group, even if such accountability structures are typically weak. Many actors in this space also consider local law enforcement as at least tacit allies in their efforts to 'quell riots' or 'protect property.' These actors range from militia groups like the Oath Keepers, who showed up in Louisville, Kentucky to 'assist' police and 'guard' gas stations around protests over the Breonna Taylor¹⁶ case, to more local groups like the gathering of armed vigilantes in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho ahead of fears of a rumored 'Antifa' action.

Importantly, this trajectory focuses on networked 'calls to action,' though is in line with a more decentralized response system. Muster calls, lobby days, declarations of restitution, and other calls to action tend to precede these events. This serves to make such incidents more predictable for policymakers and local law enforcement. In this way, it is distinct from the trajectory described below (Increasing Attacks by Violent Sole Perpetrators). The latter is more sporadic and less predictable, making its likelihood in both the short- and medium-term — as well as its potential for violence — higher.

(3) Increasing attacks by violent sole perpetrators

If demonstrations increasingly come under attack by violent sole perpetrators, there will be a higher risk of widespread individualized violence and disorder. This type of incident — including car rammings, individual assaults, or 'leaderless resistance' modalities — have become more common since May, and especially in support of President Trump around the election.

Car-ramming attacks have become increasingly common in the US, especially relative to other countries (NPR, 21 June 2020) — a trend that is at particularly high risk of intensifying given encouragement online (e.g. "All Lives Splatter" memes) (Bloomberg, 3 June 2020) and the major emphasis on 'Trump train' and caravan/convoy demonstrations in recent right-wing mobilization. In these types of demonstrations, supporters, usually in pick-up trucks, drive into and through towns, often making threats from their vehicles or online, and sometimes even intentionally ramming counter-protesters. Those engaging in these demonstrations are also often armed, which heightens the risk of violence (Vanity Fair, 7 December 2020; Washington Post, 1 November 2020). For example, two days before the election, a pro-Trump car caravan rally was held in Richmond, Virginia, with counter-protesters also present nearby (Richmond Times-Dispatch, 2 November 2020). While no injuries were reported, violence ensued. Some pro-Trump supporters sprayed chemical irritants at the counter-protesters. Witnesses report shots being fired, with at least one pro-Trump supporter allegedly firing a gun at a counter-protester. Another counter-protester stated that he narrowly avoided being run over by one of the vehicles participating in the caravan.

While car rammings have not been a tactic used exclusively by the right-wing — for example, in late July, several demonstrators taking part in a 'Defend the Police' rally, organized by the Northern Colorado Young Republicans, were hit by an SUV in Eaton, Colorado (Greeley Tribune, 25 July 2020) — they have disproportionately targeted the left.

'MAGA Drag' events, as they are often termed around and beyond the election, have resulted in several high-profile events, aside from individual car-ramming attacks. For example, the week before the election, a group of drivers supporting President Trump surrounded a Biden/Harris campaign bus on a stretch of highway outside of Austin, Texas. Pro-Trump supporters, many of whom were armed, surrounded the bus on the interstate and attempted to drive it off the road (CNN, 1 November 2020). One of the drivers hit a Biden campaign staffer's car. The event, which caused the Biden campaign to cancel an event in nearby Pflugerville due to safety concerns (Texas Tribune, 31 October 2020), was "celebrated" by President Trump, who tweeted his support for those who had swarmed the bus (NPR, 1 November 2020). Since the vote, in mid-November, during a protest against the president while he was golfing at Trump National Golf Club in Sterling, Virginia, a pro-Trump counter-protester forcefully exhaled on two women demonstrators after they commented that he was not wearing a face mask during the pandemic. The Trump supporter was later charged with misdemeanor assault amid coronavirus concerns (Politico, 23 November 2020).

Individualized violence and intimidation is also common outside of these contexts, in the form of hate crimes. In recent weeks, ACLED has recorded multiple cases of property destruction targeting specific ethnic, religious, and political groups. In Alabama, unidentified assailants perpetrated an arson attack against a business owned by the leader of the local BLM chapter (WBRC, 12 November 2020), though there were no reports of anyone hurt in the incident. In Texas, the mailbox of a pro-Biden couple was spray-painted with swastikas weeks after all of their Biden-Harris signs were destroyed (KLTV, 16 November 2020). Likewise, a swastika painted on a newspaper was left outside the office of a left-leaning news outlet in Kentucky. Furthermore, the Jewish Center at the University of Kentucky was vandalized after the Rabbi claimed to have received death threats. In November, the FBI reported that hate crimes in the US rose to their highest levels in over a decade last year (AP, 16 November 2020).

Importantly, this trajectory focuses on how individual actors, outside of more 'firm networks,' may use gatherings to commit violence or to intimidate political rivals. Such gatherings can serve as a platform or area of operations for individuals prepared to commit violence or disorder to follow through on their ideation, often as people are leaving marches or after protests disintegrate. In this way, this trajectory is distinct from the one described above (Mass Mobilization of Decentralized, Armed Individuals). It is more sporadic and unpredictable, making its likelihood in both the short- and medium-term, as well as its potential for violence, higher than the former, which relies on networked 'calls to action' through a more decentralized response system.

(4) Unarmed mass mobilization

If demonstrations represent mass mobilization of unarmed, non-militia — or otherwise broadly unaffiliated — and heterogenous right-wing individuals, then there will be a lower risk of lethal violence, and yet a higher risk of street-fighting, especially brawls with counter-protesters. Right-wing demonstrations are highly competitive, and counter-protests disproportionately involve right-wing supporters. Approximately 19% of all demonstrations in the US since the election have been right-wing, but right-wing activists have participated in more than 80% of all counter-protests during the same period (see graph below).¹⁷

Right-Wing Demonstrations since Election (3 - 28 November 2020)

Counter-protests since Election

80% of counter-protests since the election have involved right-wing supporters...

All Demonstrations since Election of demonstrations since the election have been right-wing does not mean that over 81% have been left-wing). For example, a large proportion of demonstrations in recent weeks have been related to the coronavirus pandemic (for more, see this recent infographic from ACLED's COVID-19 Disorder Tracker). While some of these can be categorized as right-wing (e.g. those involving armed right-wing groups challenging the state's authority to mandate mask-wearing) or as left-wing (e.g. those admonishing the Trump administration's handling of the pandemic), others cannot be easily categorized as such. For example, a protest involving restaurant staff advocating against coronavirus restrictions so that they can get back to work is not necessarily 'right-wing,' and a protest involving healthcare workers advocating for more access to personal protective equipment (PPE) to keep them safe is not necessarily 'left-wing.' Many of these types of demonstrations do not cite involvement by a right- or left-wing group, and sources do not report protesters making right- or left-wing claims. As such, the specific political stance of such protests cannot be definitively known — and is hence not grouped into right-wing or left-wing categories for this analysis.

Pro-Trump demonstrations have drawn numerous protesters, many of whom may not have previously taken to the streets over the summer. These individuals have been consuming a very particular strain of fringe media that has shaped the way they will respond, particularly around the acceptance of election results. Whether these sources be QAnon, anti-mask, or election fraud information streams, disinformation articles are often shared on friendly social media sites, like Parler, or on militia forums, such as MyMilitia (Conversation, 27 November 2020). There is also substantial spread of violent memes and content around attacking left- or BLM-associated protesters that have, in some instances, been tied directly to violence (Wall Street Journal, 25 October 2020).

In addition to a space to protest, these demonstrations also provide networking and recruitment opportunities. A collection of right-wing ideologies have been present at these demonstrations: a coalition of convenience and common purpose. It includes the likes of InfoWars, a right-wing conspiracy news site headed by Alex Jones, who has a history of involvement in street rallies; to the Groyper Army, Nick Fuentes' most recent evolution of the America First traditionalist, neo-fascist movement; to viewers of One America News Network (OANN), a far-right media outfit friendly to Trump and pro-Trump writers; to QAnon, the conspiracy theory originating from 4Chan users, detailing Trump's fight against the 'deep state' that opposes Trump and connects to theories that powerful Democrats run a secret pedophilia ring for the world's elite; to Proud Boys and other armed groups; and beyond.

These groups have already come together at protests since the election. On 14 November, thousands of Trump supporters made the trek to Washington, DC to participate in a large 'Stop the Steal' event called the 'Million MAGA March.' Attendees included hundreds of unarmed, unaffiliated protesters as well as groups like the Proud Boys, the Oath Keepers, Boogaloo Bois, the III%ers, OAnon, and the American Guard, among others, who were in turn met by counter-protesters, including BLM supporters and antifascists, among others (BuzzFeed, 15 November 2020). While the march during the day was largely peaceful, rioting and fighting between the right and left was reported both before and after the march, including fist fights; use of clubs and projectiles; setting off fireworks; spraying of irritants; multiple stabbings; and a car-ramming attack (Washington Post, 15 November 2020). Days later, a multi-day protest was held in Atlanta, Georgia, attracting hundreds of people. Right-wing influencers like Alex Jones of InfoWars, Nick Fuentes of Groypers, and Enrique Tarrio of the Proud Boys, among others, were in attendance. Demonstrators marched into the state capitol as part of a 'Stop the Steal' event amid Georgia's high-profile recount (Daily Mail, 18 November 2020). Several participants held 'We are Q' signs, in support of QAnon, and 'thin blue line' flags, expressing support for law enforcement. The group was met by a small group of counter-protesters, including BLM and Antifa supporters, among others (11Alive, 21 November 2020).

Such networking and recruitment across group identities has the potential for further ideological escalation into the future. Given the local nature of these protests, local politics also serve to impact the political inclinations of the demonstrators, in turn creating space for coalition building and cross-pollination among the participating movements. The 'Stop the Steal' mobilizations have moved from grassroots-organized protests in places like Arizona towards more centrally organized and nationally orchestrated mobilizations with a dedicated political action committee, such as the 'Million MAGA March'. With this national attention, a broader coalition of right-wing actors and ideologies have been mobilized and engaged in demonstrations, from militia groups and white nationalists to conspiracy theorists and internet trolls.

Conclusion

Pro-Trump and right-wing organizing has changed significantly since the election, and analysis of ACLED data indicates that it will likely continue to evolve going into the inauguration and initial stages of the Biden administration. Demonstrations have increasingly involved organized, armed militia groups. They have also involved armed, decentralized, and potentially violent individuals, especially those who may respond to 'muster calls' or travel from a distance to take action. And they have involved unarmed mass mobilization as well — all while sporadic attacks by sole perpetrators have become more common.

Right-wing groups and militias are already planning events on and around Inauguration Day, shifting in recent weeks from viewing the 'Stop the Steal' movement as the ultimate form of mobilization towards contesting the election with the assumption that the result cannot be changed before Biden takes office. The emergence of new groups and organizing parties indicates that militias and armed groups are not going away after the end of the election period. Given the resurgence of the modern militia movement in 2009, following the election and inauguration of former President Barack Obama, similar patterns are already beginning to replicate themselves — from militia recruitment to Tea Party-style political organizing.

Even as key trends in activity have changed, many of the same political strains that have impacted social movements, mobilization, and violence over the summer have persisted through the election and will continue into the near future. This includes the coronavirus crisis, which has worsened during the election and post-election period. Spikes in COVID-19 deaths have been highly correlated with demonstrations linked to the pandemic (for more, see this recent infographic from ACLED's COVID-19 Disorder Tracker) — both those demanding a stronger government response to curb the pandemic, as well as those opposed to public health restrictions. With cases and deaths surging (Washington Post, 7 December 2020), officials are likely to take further steps to slow the spread of the virus, such as the renewed stay-at-home order put in place in California (The Guardian, 7 December 2020). In December, President-elect Biden stated that he will ask Americans to wear face masks for the first 100 days after he takes office (CNN, 3 December 2020). A more forceful government response to the pandemic, especially at the national level, could lead to a major increase in counter-mobilizing on the right.

The future of right-wing mobilization will also be impacted by changes in gun regulation. Many on the armed right are extremely worried about President-elect Biden or other newly elected Democrats implementing gun restrictions (CNN, 12 November 2020). Concerns are primarily focused on potential AR-15 or high-capacity magazine bans, both of which would likely drive major armed right-wing mobilization to state capitols and Washington, DC (CBS News, 12 November 2020; Vox, 20 August 2020). The risk of armed unrest around the gun regulation debate is likely to grow, as increasingly militant pro-Second Amendment organizations have continued to thrive throughout 2020 (Mother Jones, 2 December 2020).

Lastly, core drivers of left-wing mobilization — which is also a major motivator of reactive right-wing counter-mobilization — largely remain in place. From unmet promises for social and racial justice, to COVID-19's massive economic impact, especially on marginalized communities, to persistent inequities in the healthcare system, the US has failed to meet many of the needs identified by these movements. The intersection of future spikes in left-wing protest activity and the right-wing mobilization patterns outlined above could constitute significant flashpoints for violence and unrest.

President Trump's continued refusal to concede, support for disinformation campaigns aimed at delegitimizing the incoming administration, and reported preliminary planning to launch a 2024 bid to retake the White House on Inauguration Day (NBC News, 1 December 2020) — in addition to the potential for stronger public health restrictions, new gun regulations, and resurgent left-wing activism under President Biden — are among the range of drivers that could activate and shape the trajectories identified in this report. Monitoring these risk factors will be critical for efforts to prevent peaceful mobilization from devolving into political violence, and mitigating the threat of violent instability through the inauguration and beyond.

U.S. Prosecutors Expect to Charge Hundreds of Capitol Rioters (/dr20210113-u-s-prosecutors-expect-to-

By Masood Farivar

U.S. prosecutors say they have identified more than 170 people for potential criminal charges in connection with the January 6 storming of the U.S. Capitol and that they expect that number to run into the hundreds in the coming weeks as a massive nationwide hunt for the pro-Trump rioters continues.

Is Impeaching President Trump "Pointless Revenge"? Not If It Sends a Message to Future

Presidents (/dr20210113-is-impeaching-president-trumppointless-revenge-not-if-it-sends-a-message-to-future-presidents) By Michael Blake

If Congress chooses to impeach President Trump, it is because there is a need to mark out, through a definitive statement, what no president ought to do. It will also set the moral limits of the presidency – and, thereby, send a message to future presidents who might be tempted to follow in President Trump's footsteps.

As the Vaccines Arrive, So Do the Questions

(/dr20210113-as-the-vaccines-arrive-so-do-the-questions) By Robin Rauzi

As the first COVID-19 vaccines are being administered across the United States-developed, tested, and approved with historic speed -countless questions have arisen about what comes next. Is one vaccine better than another? Can the United States both speed up inoculation and overcome some people's hesitance to get the shot?

There's no doubt the Earth's temperatures are going up. The power plants that keep air conditioners pushing out cold air could soon be in a vicious cycle in a warming world—not able to keep up with growing demands on hotter days and driving up greenhouse gas emissions to dangerous levels.

Finding Toxic Chemicals in Drinking Water

(/dr20210113-finding-toxic-chemicals-in-drinking-water)

Most consumers of drinking water in the United States know that chemicals are used in the treatment processes to ensure the water is safe to drink. But they might not know that the use of some of these chemicals, such as chlorine, can also lead to the formation of unregulated toxic byproducts.

Beating the "Billion-Dollar Bug" Is a Shared Burden (/dr20210113-beating-the-billiondollar-bug-is-a-shared-burden)

A lurking threat that has stymied US corn growers for decades is now returning to the forefront: western corn rootworm. Sometimes referred to as the "billion-dollar bug," the species' tiny larvae chew through the roots of corn plants, causing devastating yield losses. In 2003, farmers began planting a genetically engineered variety of corn known as "Bt," which produces a protein toxic to the pest species — but by 2009, the billion-dollar bug had already evolved adaptations for resistance to the toxin. Study shows how individual farming practices associated with greater corn rootworm damage can have farther-reaching effects.

The FBI is warning state and local and law enforcement around the country of plans for violent action by right-wing extremists in the day leading up to the inauguration of Joe Biden on 20 January. According to the FBI, various right-wing extremist groups are planning a series of protests in the capitals of all fifty states between 16 and 20 January, and in Washington, D.C. between the 17 and 20 of January.

U.S. Capitol Mob Highlights 5 Reasons Not to Underestimate Far-Right Extremists (/dr20210112-

u-s-capitol-mob-highlights-5-reasons-not-to-underestimate-farright-extremists)

By Alexander Hinton

In the wake of the mob incursion that took over the U.S. Capitol on Jan. 6, it's clear that many people are concerned about violence from far-right extremists. But they may not understand the real threat. While researching my forthcoming book, It Can Happen Here: White Power and the Rising Threat of Genocide in the U.S., I discovered that there are five key mistakes people make when thinking about far-right extremists. These mistakes obscure the extremists' true danger.

U.S. Hits Back at Russian Election Disinformation Ring (/dr20210112-u-s-hits-back-at-russian-election-disinformation-ring)

By Jeff Seldin

The United States is taking steps to punish members of a Russian-backed influence operation that sought to interfere with November's election and damage the campaign of President-elect Joe Biden. The Treasury Department on Monday announced sanctions against seven people and four companies, all connected to Ukrainian politician Andrii Derkach, previously identified by U.S. officials as a long-time Russian agent. Derkach fed Rudi Giuliani, Donald Trump's personal lawyer, Russia-fabricated derogatory misinformation on Joe Biden, and Giuliani's role in the plot was to disseminate it on pro-Trump news outlets like One America Network.

Truth decay

Stopping the Deluge of Disinformation Flooding the Internet, Social Media (/dr20210112-

stopping-the-deluge-of-disinformation-flooding-the-internet-social-media)

The use and spread of disinformation — false or misleading information intended to deceive people — is being amplified and accelerated at an alarming rate on the internet via social media. Within the U.S., this has quickly eroded trust in institutions that serve as the bedrocks of our society, such as science, the media, and government, to the point that we can't even agree on basic facts.

By Kim Martineau

Nuclear energy provides more carbon-free electricity in the United States than solar and wind combined, making it a key player in the fight against climate change. But the U.S. nuclear fleet is aging, and operators are under pressure to streamline their operations to compete with coal- and gas-fired plants. Researchers show that deep reinforcement learning can be used to design more efficient nuclear reactors.

By Jeff Seldin

Law enforcement officials in charge of protecting the U.S. Capitol repeatedly declined offers of additional assistance ahead of Wednesday's protest-turned-riot that forced lawmakers to take shelter, delaying certification of the results of the country's presidential election. The allegations, from defense and military officials, come a day after large crowds of extremists supporting President Donald Trump pushed past barricades and members of the Capitol Police to rampage through the building.

The Uncomfortable Questions Facing Capitol Police over the Security Breach by MAGA Mob

(/dr20210108-the-uncomfortable-questions-facing-capitol-policeover-the-security-breach-by-maga-mob)

By Tom Nolan

When die-hard Trump supporters are able to storm the U.S. Capitol and forcefully occupy offices in the House and the Senate, questions over security are going to be asked. Something clearly didn't go to plan on Wednesday. The man in charge of policing that day, U.S. Capitol Police Chief Steven Sund, has since announced he is resigning. But even with him gone, what will remain are serious questions that will need to be answered about how an angry mob was able to circumvent security and enter the Capitol building.

PERSPECTIVE: Capitol security failure

Tragedy at the Capitol: Four Questions that Demand Answers (/dr20210108-tragedy-at-the-capitol-fourquestions-that-demand-answers)

How can the U.S. Capitol, surrounded by one of the largest concentrations of law enforcement and national security personnel in the world, be so quickly overrun by Trump insurrectionists hellbent on "stopping the steal," halting our cherished democratic processes, and potentially harming lawmakers? Mark Nevitt writes that "it was always drilled home from my time in the military the importance of unity of command and unity of effort.... But prior to the insurrection, Trump himself incited it, in tweets and in a speech that morning. Shockingly, the person at the very top of the chain of command was not interested in protecting the Capitol nor the lawmakers inside during a time of national crisis."

Extremists React to Pro-Trump Siege on Capitol

(/dr20210108-extremists-react-to-protrump-siege-on-capitol)

On Wednesday, January 6, 2021, pro-Trump extremists, including some identified right-wing extremists, stormed the U.S. Capitol building, interrupting the Congressional session affirming the election results and forcing a partial evacuation. In chatrooms and other extremist forums, many people cheered the actions of those at the Capitol, praising the trespassers as patriots who were willing to "stand up" to politicians and the government. many users shared their belief that war is coming, and some encouraged people to be prepared for further action.

Capitol Hill Riots Prompt Germany to Revisit Online Hate Speech Law (/dr20210108-capitol-hill-riots- prompt-germany-to-revisit-online-hate-speech-law)

Numerous social networks were quick to impose bans President Donald Trump, preventing him from continuing to disseminate lies on their platforms, and, more importantly, blocking him from using his social media accounts to incite violence. For many critics, these restrictions came four years too late. The assault on the U.S. Capitol by Trump supporters has led to fresh calls in Germany for more restrictions on extremist speech in Germany, too.

DHS

The Role of Congressional Oversight in Department Reform (/dr20210108-the-role-of-congressional-oversight-in-department-reform)

By Julia Siegel

The Scowcroft Center's Forward Defense project and the Center for a New American Security (CNAS) hosted a panel of former Department of Homeland Security (DHS) officials to discuss why now is the time to streamline congressional oversight of DHS. The goal of the Forward Defense project is to craft sustainable, nonpartisan strategies that meet the complex security challenges of today and tomorrow, and the panel explored how fragmented congressional oversight impacts DHS and charted a path forward.

3. Man Arrested At WA Capitol Part Of Group That Breached Gate At Governor's Mansion [MYNorthwest] SE

- The Washington State Patrol arrested two people at the state capitol campus on Monday [Jan. 11] as the 2021 legislative session kicked off. WSP reported that the second arrest a 30-year-old male was also determined to have been one of the people that breached a gate at the governor's mansion last Wednesday [Jan. 6].
- Troopers say on Monday the man failed to comply with a lawful order after attempting to enter a restricted area.
- WSP announced the first arrest shortly after 8:20 a.m., taking a woman using an RV to block a roadway into custody. The woman reportedly "refused to comply with orders to move."

4. 2 Capitol Police Officers Suspended And At Least 10 More Under Investigation For Alleged Roles In Riot [CNN] WFO

- Two US Capitol Police officers were suspended and at least 10 more are under investigation for their behavior during last week's assault on the Capitol, and federal agents will look at whether current and former law enforcement officers played a role in the riot.
- One of the Capitol police officers took a selfie with someone who was part of the mob that overtook the Capitol and the other wore a "Make America Great Again" hat and started directing people around the building, according to Rep. Tim Ryan, an Ohio Democrat.

- A photograph circulating on social media of two off-duty Rocky Mount police officers inside the U.S. Capitol during Wednesday's riot sparked a Black Lives Matter protest Sunday [Jan. 10] outside the department's building on North Main Street.
- In the image, Rocky Mount Police Sgt. T.J. Robertson and Officer Jacob Fracker stand before a statue of John Stark, a Revolutionary War officer from New Hampshire. Robertson appears to be pointing at Fracker, while Fracker, who took the selfie, is making an obscene gesture at the camera.
- The Rocky Mount Police Department on Sunday [Jan. 10] said it notified federal authorities that two of its off-duty officers were present during the Capitol attack, which a town news release described only as "an event in Washington, D.C.
- "T.J. Robertson aka Thomas Robertson" and "Jacob Fracker" are positive in FBI holdings. Program Manager: DTOU
- 6. Insurrectionist's Ex-Wife Identified Him To The Feds [The Cut via New York Post] WFO
- An arrest affidavit for Larry Randall Brock a retired Air Force lieutenant colonel whose image was widely circulated after he participated in the January 6 siege of Congress states that Brock's ex-wife contacted the FBI's National Threat Operations Center on January 8.
- She reportedly said that she recognized his military gear, and added, "I just know that when I saw this was happening I was afraid he would be there. I think you already know he was there. It is such a good picture of him and I recognize his patch."
- "Larry Randall Brock" is positive in FBI holdings. Program Manager: DTOU

7. Army Investigating Psychological Operations Officer Present At Capitol On Day Of Riot [MSN via Newsweek] WFO

- The Army is investigating one of its active-duty officers who was at the U.S. Capitol on January 6, when rioters stormed the federal building.
- The 1st Special Forces Command said Monday [Jan. 11] that it was aware of Captain Emily Rainey's presence at the Capitol on the day of the riot and that the command, based at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, is "currently investigating to determine the facts as to her exact involvement."

11. U.S. Imposes Sanctions On Ukrainians Over Election Interference [Reuters]

- The U.S. on Monday [Jan. 11] imposed sanctions on several Ukrainian individuals and entities, accusing them of U.S. election interference and associating with a pro-Russian Ukrainian lawmaker linked to efforts by President Donald Trump's allies to dig up dirt on President-elect Joe Biden and his son.
- The U.S. Treasury Department accused the seven individuals and four entities of involvement in a Russia-linked foreign influence network associated with Ukrainian parliamentarian Andriy Derkach.
- The pro-Russian lawmaker was hit with sanctions by the U.S. government in September over accusations he tried to interfere in the 2020 U.S. election won by Biden.

12. Beavercreek [Oregon] Man Arrested, Charged After Firing Handgun Into The [Portland, OR] Hatfield Federal Courthouse [DOJ] PD

- Cody Melby, 39, has been charged by criminal complaint with destruction of government property.
- At approximately 7:35pm on January 8, Melby allegedly jumped over a security fence at the Hatfield Courthouse and, using a 9mm handgun, fired several rounds into the building's exterior. Two courthouse security officers exited the building and approached Melby after observing him on a closed-circuit security camera. Melby told the officers he had a gun and the officers placed him in handcuffs without further incident.
