Stone Fence

AGED RUM, SPARKLING APPLE CIDER, AROMATIC BITTERS, LEMON PEEL & FRESHLY GRATED NUTMEG

Before raiding Fort Ticonderoga in 1775 at the beginning of the Revolutionary War, Ethan Allen and the Green Mountain Boys went drinking at a nearby tavern where they knocked back a mixture of rum and hard cider. Finding only a dozing guard, Allen stormed the officers' quarters and demanded they surrender "in the name of the Continental Congress." The English didn't offer much resistance and the fort was successfully seized, thanks in part to the blood-warming Stone Fence.

Thank you for joining us for the Secretary of State's Madison Dinner. As Secretary of State, James Madison along with his wife, Dolley Madison, hosted dinners that gathered thinkers and leaders to share ideas on the future of America and the world. Through the Madison Dinner Series, Secretary Pompeo honors their wisdom in seeing the value of building relationships and sharing intellectual thought to enrich our country and to further our diplomatic goals.

A delicious taste of summer, the Cherry Bounce dates back to the 17th century and was a favorite drink of George Washington, who enjoyed the brandy-based recipe made by his wife Martha. He was known to take a canteen full for jaunts with the Presidential dog. The tradition lives on today with an update on the colonial-era classic: ripe summer cherries are steeped with cane sugar, infused into rye whiskey, dashed with aromatic bitters and garnished with a maraschino-soaked cherry.

The Quill

RYE WHISKEY AND MADEIRA, ZESTY GRAPEFRUIT JUICE,
LUXARDO MARASCHINO, BITTERS

The Quill is inspired by the writing implement used by Thomas Jefferson in drafting the Declaration of Independence. Large goose or swan feathers were the tool of choice for scribes, providing an unmatched sharp stroke and great flexibility. The cocktail utilizes ingredients that Jefferson and his fellow signers would have enjoyed in 18th century America.

AMBER RUM, PEACH EAU DE VIE, PEACH TEA
OLEO-SACCHARUM (A CITRUS INFUSED SYRUP) & LEMON JUICE

This classic 18th century American cocktail was made for warm summer days and is said to be a favorite of George Washington. It was born from a group of rebellious (and likely overheated) colonial Americans who founded a pre-Revolution angler's club called the Schuylkill Fishing Company of Pennsylvania. Its constituents actually declared the assemblage a sovereign state, and called themselves "citizens." It remains the oldest continuously operating social club in the English-speaking world.

Applejack is a classic American brandy dating back to colonial days which was popular thanks to plentiful apple orchards and the relative ease with which it could be made. Applejack didn't require specialized equipment such as stills to produce, instead it was crafted using the freeze-distilling-method, making it the perfect spirit for winter sipping.
